Former teacher's sex case moves to grand jury

Judge: Finding of probable cause was a 'close call'

By SARAH BENNETT
sbennett@thenewsenterprise.com

Hardin District Judge Kim Shumate found probable cause Monday in the sexual abuse case against former LaRue County High School teacher Natalie C. Gentry but said the decision was "a close call."

A preliminary hearing specifically focused on the first-degree sexual abuse charge, the only felony charge against the 33-year-old

GENTRY

Hardin County resident. Gentry also faces counts of second-degree official misconduct. The charges stem from alleged encounters with two male LaRue County High School students, one a 17-year-old and the other 18.

During testimony Monday, Kentucky State Police Detective Aaron Gabhart told the court an LaRue County High School official initially reported the complaint to him. After rumors spread at the school, Assistant Principal Rodney Armes confronted the 17-year-old, who allegedly told officials he had sexual intercourse with Gentry.

Gabhart said he spoke with the teen at the district's central office and was told the consensual contact occurred in summer 2011 in Gentry's bedroom at her home in Elizabethtown. The 17-year-old told the detective it was a one-time encounter and occurred while he was working for her.

During the course of the investigation, Gabhart said he learned of the 18-year-old student who claimed to have had sexual intercourse with the teacher on multiple occasions over the course of several months.

Radcliff to discontinue funding for One Knox

Officials say they no longer see benefit of agency's servicesBy MARTY FINLEY
mfinley@thenewsenterprise.com

One Knox soon could be losing one source of its funding.

Radcliff City Council plans to vote next Tuesday to discontinue its funding for the program that played a critical role in preparing Hardin County during the Base Realignment and Closure initiative, which was mandated by Congress in 2005 and wrapped up last year.

The council verbally committed to pulling the city's funding for One Knox during an informal work session Monday and likely will make the cut before the budget cycle ends in June.

Radcliff Chief Financial Officer Chance Fox said the city allotted $12,500 to One Knox this year and owes a payment of about $1,800 for expenses through December. Fox said the city is billed quarterly by the organization.

"It will only be fair that we pay for expenses that have incurred," he said.

Fox said One Knox still has a budget and operational expenses when asked by council members what expenses had accrued.

Fox also said the city may consider paying through the end of March since it already is in the middle of the latest quarter. If so, there would be a savings of roughly $3,100 in this budget cycle. The city would save about half of the money it budgeted for One Knox if it opts not to pay for the current quarter, Fox added.

Mayor J.J. Duvall said the Lincoln Trail Area Development District also has informed Radcliff officials of the possibility of federal grant funding being pulled back on One Knox from the Office of Economic Adjustment.

A historical marker denoting the life of Sonora native Carl Brashear sits in the Sonora Veterans Park along East Western Avenue. The park has a sign honoring area veterans on one side with the other side listing in memory those veterans who have died. Sonora Veterans Park completion planned for May Sonora Veterans Park has taken shape faster than Carol Rogers ever thought it would.

The project is nearing completion, with expectations of it being finished by the end of May.

A grassy median across from The Cecilian Bank on East Western Avenue has been transformed since Rogers and other volunteers decided last summer to turn the donated patch into a memorial honoring veterans from the Sonora, Glendale and Upton areas who have died.

Since then, a gazebo has been erected. Newly laid sidewalks lead from the structure's three entrances throughout the park. Low rock walls, which might become flower beds, ring the gazebo, accompanying a longstanding sign that now reads "In Honor of Those Who Served."

White wooden crosses with veterans' first initials and last names on them and small flags attached are staked along the park's perimeter and along the sidewalks, with more to be added as more veterans in the area die or are brought to organizers' attention. There are 115 crosses so far.

It's important Sonora and other community members honor veterans, Rogers said.

E'town authorizes coordinator position for events program

Council approves partnership agreement with tourism bureauBy MARTY FINLEY
mfinley@thenewsenterprise.com

Elizabethtown city officials have authorized creation of an events coordinator position to manage city festivals, concerts and programs and have narrowed down a pool of nearly 50 applicants to two.

Elizabethtown City Council made the move in a special meeting Monday while also authorizing a five-year events program partnership agreement with the Elizabethtown Tourism & Convention Bureau after the Hardin County Chamber of Commerce relinquished the Heartland Festival and Cruisin' the Heartland to explore small business and economic development initiatives.

Business reports second burglary in 3 days

By SARAH BENNETT
sbennett@thenewsenterprise.com

Two Elizabethtown businesses reported break-ins Saturday morning, and televisions were taken from both locations.

At 11:17 a.m. Saturday, Elizabethtown police responded to Hospice & Palliative Care at 105 Diecks Drive in reference to a burglary, according to an EPD news release. The same business reported a burglary three days before. Police said suspects entered by shattering a window.

The same method of entry was used in the March 7 break-in during which suspects attempted to remove a television but were unsuccessful, according to EPD.

Elizabethtown police also responded Saturday morning to Tony's Collision Center at 5232 N. Dixie Ave. on another burglary report.

As with the Hospice case, the suspects entered by breaking a window, police said. Two wall-mounted televisions were taken.

Since March 7, Elizabethtown police have reported three business break-ins during which suspects entered through a shattered window and took or attempted to take televisions. In addition to Hospice and Tony's Collision, Dr. James Campbell's office at 103 Diecks Drive also was burglarized. EPD asks anyone with information about the break-ins to call CrimeStoppers at 1-800-597-8123.

Library staff, local officials and community members gathered Monday afternoon to rededicate the North Branch of the Hardin County Public Library on South Logsdon Parkway in Radcliff. Initially opened in 1976, the building closed for five months for structural repairs, which cost $138,126, according to Judge-Executive Harry Berry. Insurance covered 84 percent of the costs. Icon Engineering drew the plans and Crepps Construction was contractor on the renovations and repairs.

Strong sales push up general fund revenue

By ROGER ALFORD
The Associated Press

FRANKFORT — An 8.5 percent increase in sales tax revenue has brought more money into the state's general fund than expected.

State Budget Director Mary Lassiter said total receipts for February were up 3.8 percent, despite declines in revenue from the individual income tax and property tax. Lassiter credited holiday gift cards that were late being used for bolstering the overall growth.

Sales tax is collected when the cards are redeemed on taxable items, she said.

February typically is not Kentucky's best month for revenue collection, so the increase, however slight, is welcome news in a state where lawmakers are working on a budget that is expected to require cuts to most government agencies and services.

The House passed an austere budget last week. The Senate is reviewing it, but hasn't yet scheduled a floor vote.

Some 200,000 state and local government retirees would be among the people feeling the state's financial pinch. The proposed budget would eliminate 1.5 percent cost-of-living increases from their monthly pension payments.

Lassiter said general fund revenue grew by $21.2 million in February.

Collections from the corporate income tax and cigarette tax also grew, but individual income tax collections fell just a little.

Property tax collections were down by 6.1 percent, and coal severance tax collections were off by 10.1 percent.

The state budget is based on an estimated 2.8 percent growth in general fund revenue for the fiscal year. To meet that estimate, receipts would have to grow an additional 1 percent over the next four months. The fiscal year ends June 30.

House panel postpones vote on smoking ban

By ROGER ALFORD
The Associated Press

FRANKFORT — Despite two unexpected delays, a proposed statewide ban on smoking in public places could receive a vote Wednesday in the House Health and Welfare Committee.

Chairman Tom Burch, D-Louisville, called off a meeting Monday because some lawmakers who support the proposal were unavailable to attend.

The measure had been expected to come up for a vote last week, but a Republican boycott forced it to be postponed because the panel lacked a quorum.

The bill, intended to protect Kentuckians from second-hand smoke, would prohibit lighting up indoors at a wide range of businesses, including bars and restaurants. The ban would extend even to private homes if those homes are used for child care or adult day care.

Such a measure has been discussed in Kentucky for years, but lawmakers in the major tobacco-producing state have been reluctant to tackle the issue.

Rep. Susan Westrom, D-Lexington, said she is confident the measure will pass the committee, but she wasn't sure Monday whether it would be presented for a floor vote in the House.

"My concern is I don't think it has the votes to get out of the Senate," Westrom said. "If we don't have the votes to get it out of the Senate, I don't think we'll vote on it in the House."

Tonya Chang, advocacy director in Kentucky for the American Heart Association, said she sees no reason for Kentucky lawmakers to be reluctant to pass legislation that would have positive health benefits.

"This is an issue that's widely supported in the public," Chang said. "Twenty-three states already do what we're seeking to do."

Despite the delays, Burch said he believes the bill will easily pass.

KSP collections headed to Menifee County

Kentucky State Police troopers, personnel and volunteers will gather this morning at Post 4 to prepare to deliver needed supplies to tornado-ravaged Menifee County.

For the past few days, Post 4 has served as a collection site for supplies needed by victims of the severe weather two weeks ago. The small trailer available to store items proved inadequate because of the volume of donations.

Dennis and Nancy Robey of Keyboard Carriage offered to provide two 50-foot trailers and volunteered to drive them to the sites.

Residents from all eight counties in the post's service area donated everything from baby wipes to shovels and first aid kits and canned goods.

Police plan to escort the semis from Post 4 near Interstate 65 off North Mulberry Street to two locations in Menifee County. The convoy leaves at 8 a.m. today.

MAMMOTH CAVE

Controlled fires planned

Park officials at Mammoth Cave National Park say they will conduct two controlled fires this spring.

The two areas, the Crystal Cave Unit along Flint Ridge and the Chaumont unit in the park's southeast corner, have previously been burned.

The fires will help promote certain plant species while helping control invasives.

Park Superintendent Patrick Reed says much preparation goes into the fires, and fire officials from other parks come to Mammoth Cave to help.

Since 2002, the park has conducted 22 prescribed fires.

Students to get college, career preparation advice

Students across Kentucky are getting advice this week on how to prepare for college or a career.

As part of Operation Preparation, eighth- and 10th-grade students are scheduled to meet with trained community advisers to review their college and career plans. They'll talk about their career aspirations and the required education and training involved. The sessions also will focus on whether the students are on target to meet their goals.

Kentucky Education Commissioner Terry Holli-day said the goal is to help students maximize their academic preparation and stay on track for success during high school and beyond.

The majority of Kentucky school districts will participate in Operation Preparation.

Afghan man recounts shooting spree

By HEIDI VOGT
The Associated Press

KANDAHAR, Afghanistan — An Afghan man recounted Monday the harrowing tale of how an American soldier on a killing spree burst into his home in the middle of the night, searched the rooms, then dropped to a knee and shot his father in the thigh as he emerged from a bedroom.

The staff sergeant now is in custody, accused of killing 16 Afghan civilians, most of them children, and then burning many of the bodies. The name of the 38-year-old soldier was not released because it would be “inappropriate” to do so before charges are filed, said Pentagon spokesman George Little.

Sunday’s attack in southern Kandahar pro-

Panetta: Death penalty possible

Defense Secretary Leon Panetta said the death penalty is a consideration as the military moves to investigate and possibly put on trial a U.S. soldier suspected of gunning down 16 Afghans. — AP vince comes as anti-Americanism already is boiling over in Afghanistan after U.S. troops burned Qurans last month and a video of Marines urinating on alleged Taliban corpses was posted on the Internet in January.

If the attack unleashes another wave of anti-foreigner hatred, it could threaten the future of the U.S.-led coalition’s mission in Afghanistan. The events also have raised doubts among U.S. political figures that the long and costly war is worthy.

NATO and member countries said the slayings were a blow to the alliance’s efforts to cultivate trust but would not affect the timeline to hand over security operations to Afghans by the end of 2014. The White House said U.S. objectives will not change because of the killings.

Outraged Afghan lawmakers called for a suspension of talks on how to formalize a long-term U.S. military presence in the country and demanded the shooter face trial in an Afghan court.

Defense Secretary Leon Panetta said Monday evening the death penalty is a consideration as the military moves to investigate and possibly put the suspect on trial.

In his first public remarks on the incident, Panetta said the shootings must not derail the military mission in Afghanistan and pressure to do so from political leaders in Kabul and Washington must not alter that course.

“We seem to get tested almost every other day with challenges that test our leadership and our commitment to the mission that we’re involved in,” Panetta told reporters traveling with him to Krygzstan. “War is hell.”

The soldier was deployed to Afghanistan on Dec. 3 with the 2nd Battalion, 3rd Infantry Regiment of the 3rd Stryker Brigade, 2nd Infantry Division, based at Joint Base Lewis-McChord located south of Seattle, according to a congressional source, speaking on the condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the matter.

He was attached Feb. 1 to the village stability program in Belambai, a half-mile from one of the villages where the attack took place, the source said.

The soldier, who has been in the military for 11 years, served three tours in Iraq and is married with two children, was being held in pretrial confinement in Kandahar.

A U.S. official who spoke on condition of anonymity said Monday that during a recent tour of duty in Iraq, the suspect was involved in a vehicle accident and suffered a head injury.

ROBOT-LIKE EQUIPMENT TO AID SEARCH FOR SHIP BODIES. Italian authorities say they are planning to use “sophisticated robot-like equipment” to help rescuers find the bodies of seven people still missing in the wreckage of the Costa Concordia cruise liner.

The Italian Civil Protection agency says the goal is to use the machines to search areas that divers have difficulty accessing.

The Concordia ran into a reef near the Tuscan island of Giglio, took on wa-

Israel’s Iron Dome rocket shield has aced its first serious test. Gaza’s Hamas rulers have been careful to stay on the sidelines. And Islamic Jihad — now closer to Iran than is its larger rival Hamas — is taking the lead in this round against Israel.

These are some of the trends emerging from four days of fighting between Israel’s air force and Gaza rocket squads, triggered by Israel’s killing of a militant leader last week. Twenty-four Palestinians have been killed, including seven on Monday, and about 1 million Israelis in rocket range have seen their lives disrupted by the threat of rocket attacks, with frequent sirens warning them to run for cover.

In a video that runs more than eight minutes, Keesey addresses questions about the San Diego-based group’s finances and criticisms that it oversimplifies or misunderstands Kony and his Lord’s Resistance Army.

He denies travel expenses are for managers to stay in nice hotels. Instead they are used to pay for 3,000 film screenings a year.

Sherwood Rowland, the Nobel prize-winning chemist who sounded the alarm on the thinning of the Earth's ozone layer and crusaded against the use of man-made chemicals that were harming earth's atmospheric blanket, has died. He was 84.

Rowland died Saturday at his home in Corona del Mar, Calif., of complications from Parkinson's disease, the dean of the University of California, Irvine's physical sciences department said Sunday.

"Rowland was among three scientists awarded the 1995 Nobel Prize for chemistry for explaining how the ozone is formed and decomposed through chemical processes in the atmosphere.

The prize was awarded more than two decades after Rowland and his post-doctoral student Mario Molina calculated that if human use of chlorofluorocarbon, a byproduct of aerosol sprays, deodorants and other household products was to continue at an unaltered rate, the ozone layer would be depleted after several decades. Their work at UC Irvine built upon findings by atmospheric scientist Paul Crutzen.

Their prediction caught enormous attention and was strongly challenged partly because CFC's non-toxic properties were thought to be environmentally safe.

Hope still remains for missing teen

By DEBORAH HIGHLAND
The Daily News

Vanessa Moldon holds out hope her missing teenage brother, Brandon Crain, will return home to Hart County.

But then she has days when the darkness creeps in and she mourns the loss of her 19-year-old brother.

Crain disappeared Jan. 26 from his mother's Munfordville home. An aunt staying in the home heard the front door open, then close at about 2 a.m. that day. Crain hasn't been seen or heard from since. He left the house without his wallet or cell-phone.

The Hart County Sheriff's Office has followed up multiple tips in several surrounding counties.

"We've had a lot of different reports, but nothing has panned out," Hart County Sheriff Boston Hensley said.

Rescue workers have searched on land, by air and in water for Crain.

"Nothing has turned up anywhere," Hensley said.

In the immediate days after his disappearance, Moldon walked the streets, handing out fliers and asking people if anyone had seen her brother.

"Some days you think he's alive so you've got that seed of hope, and some days you don't think he's alive," Moldon said. "I'm going to see him in heaven no matter what. That's what keeps me going.

"If you think he's alive, you wonder, 'Does somebody have him and is hurting him?' You try to keep your mind from going to those areas. It can get to some dark places," she said.

Crain had been the victim of bullying all his life and was teased so much in high school that he dropped out, she said. He was a quiet young man who desperately wanted friends.

"He was the outcast," Moldon said.

Even though he dropped out of school at 16, he earned a GED. He was working at Applebee's in Glasgow, a job he loved. It was there where he met his first group of friends.

In mid-January, Crain suffered a gunshot wound to his thigh, Moldon said. Crain told his sister he wanted to know what it would feel like to be shot and he shot himself with a 22-caliber gun. A mental health evaluation taken after the shooting determined Crain was not suicidal, Moldon said.

"Personally, I can't see Brandon committing suicide," Moldon said. "I can't see him getting out and walking neither. I'm just clueless. The whole thing just makes no sense. It would make more sense to hear that somebody kidnapped and hurt him versus him just getting up and leaving like that."

Sentence struck down in millennium bomb plot

Appeals court calls 22 years unreasonably lenient

By ROBERT JABLON
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Calling it unreasonably lenient, a federal appeals court on Monday overturned a 22-year prison sentence for “millennium bomber” Ahmed Ressay, who was stopped with a carload of explosive materials before he could kill people at Los Angeles International Airport in 1999.

In a 7-4 split decision, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in favor of the government’s appeal and sent the case back to a federal judge in Seattle for resentencing for a third time.

The court, which contains some of the nation’s most liberal judges, said that Ressay’s plot to blow up the airport on New Year’s Eve 1999, was “horrific” and intended to intimidate the nation and the world.

“Had Ressay succeeded, ‘LAX’ may well have entered our vocabulary as a term analogous to ‘the Oklahoma City bombing’ or ‘9/11,’” according to a majority decision written by Judge Richard R. Clif-

Ressay, an Algerian national who had attended training camps for Islamic terrorists, was arrested Dec. 14, 1999, in Port Angeles, Wash.

He had a bogus Canadian passport but his nervousness after arriving on a ferry from Canada prompted a search of his rental car. Authorities found more than 100 pounds of chemicals, along with timing devices and other equipment, to make a fertilizer-derived nitrate bomb.

In April 2001, Ressay was convicted of nine federal charges, including smuggling explosives and conspiracy to commit a terrorist act. Sentencing guidelines recommended 65 years to life in prison, but federal authorities offered lesser sentences if he would cooperate in other terrorist cases.

He cooperated for two years but later recanted some testimony.

The federal judge who sentenced Ressay said he looked at several factors, balancing the harm Ressay planned with the good his cooperation had done in fighting terrorism. But the appeals court said U.S. District Judge John C. Coughenour in Seattle committed a “clear error of judgment.”

“We acknowledge that 22 years is not a trivial period of time” but it is decades shorter than the recommended sentence from federal guidelines, said the judges in the majority opinion. It noted that under the current sentence, Ressay would be only 51 when he is released from prison and still able to do damage.

“Ressay demonstrated strongly held beliefs and a willingness to attack American interests. If and when he is released, he could try again to blow up LAX or to launch some other attack,” according to the decision.

The case now returns to Seattle for resentencing.

“Obviously, I’m disappointed that we have to go through another sentencing,” said Tom Hillier, the federal public defender who argued the case before the appellate court in Seattle. “It’s been a long haul.”

Gasoline price jumps a nickel over the weekend

By CHRIS KAHN
AP Energy Writer

NEW YORK — After a brief respite, the price of gasoline is climbing again.

The average price for a gallon of gasoline rose a nickel over the weekend and is now $3.80 per gallon. That more than wiped out the penny decline seen last Tuesday through Thursday.

That’s the highest ever for this time of year. The average pump price has risen 52 cents this year as refineries and wholesalers pass along the higher cost of crude oil. Oil is up about 8 percent since Jan. 1.

Experts say the nationwide average could rise as high as $4.25 by late April. Besides high oil prices, a switch in the type of gasoline that drivers put in their tanks will drive the price higher.

Supplies of gas tend to fall in April as refineries sell off their existing gasoline to make room for a different blend that’s required in the summer to meet clean air laws. That shortage, plus the higher price for the summer gas, typically boosts the nationwide average. And demand rises as the weather gets warmer.

Prices tend to peak in late April or early May. The nationwide average hit a high in 2011 of $3.9845 on May 5.

Already drivers in several states including Illinois, New York, Connecticut, Michigan, Oregon, Washington and the District of Columbia are paying prices around the $4 mark. Drivers in Hawaii are paying the most at $4.44 per gallon. By contrast, those in Wyoming are paying the least at $3.30 per gallon. Prices vary throughout the U.S. because of differing state taxes, transportation costs and other regional expenses.

The recent jump in prices has made gasoline a major topic of debate during the presidential campaign. Republican candidates have criticized President Obama for not doing enough to keep prices under control. Obama has countered that Republicans are ignoring steps his administration has taken to increase energy security, and that they’re offering unrealistic solutions to a global pricing problem.

In his weekly address, Obama said over that domestic oil production has increased to an eight-year high under his watch. He also stressed that America must find ways to reduce oil consumption — not simply drill for more.

“With only 2 percent of the world’s oil reserves, we can’t just drill our way to lower gas prices,” Obama said. “Not when we consume 20 percent of the world’s oil.”

Americans apparently have their doubts. A poll conducted by ABC News and the Washington Post from March 7 to March 10 found 65 percent disapprove of the way the president is handling the situation with gas prices.

Oil prices fell Monday after Chinese trade data suggested a weakening global economy. China reported a slowdown in growth in both imports and exports in its February trade data over the weekend.

Benchmark West Texas Intermediate gave up $1.06 to end at $106.34 per barrel in New York. Brent crude fell by 64 cents to end at $125.34 per barrel in London.

Natural gas dipped to a new 10-year low, falling by 5.5 cents to end at $2.27 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Yahoo sues Facebook over patents

By BARBARA ORTUTAY
AP Technology Writer

NEW YORK — Yahoo is suing Facebook over patents, just weeks before the social-networking heavyweight is due to cash in with its initial public offering of stock.

Yahoo Inc. said in a court filing Monday that Facebook has infringed 10 of its patents covering advertising, privacy controls and social networking. Yahoo had threatened to sue Facebook last month, insisting that the social network license its patents.

Facebook vowed to defend itself vigorously against what it called “puzzling actions” by Yahoo.

“We’re disappointed that Yahoo, a longtime business partner of Facebook and a company that has substantially benefited from its association with Facebook, has decided to resort to litigation,” Facebook said in a statement. Yahoo ties a lot of its online services to Facebook, which has helped it attract users.

As with many patent suits, this one will likely be resolved in a settlement or licensing deal. That said, the patent claims could cast a spotlight on Facebook’s vulnerabilities as the company tries to complete an IPO this spring. At the end of 2011, Facebook had just 56 U.S. patents, a relatively small number compared with other big tech companies. Yahoo owns more than 1,000 patents.

That trove of patents may come in handy for Yahoo, which has seen its revenue fall steadily over the past three years. But it could also cast the company as desperate, trying to extract money from soon-to-be-public Facebook.

Yahoo made hundreds of millions of dollars from a patent settlement that it reached with Google Inc. just before the Internet search leader went public in 2004. Facebook’s IPO is expected to value the social network at as much as $100 billion.

Yahoo defended its law-

GO GREEN AND CASH IN BY RECYCLING YOUR OLD CAR

AS Kermit says, “It Ain’t Easy Being Green!” Most people try hard to do the right thing when it comes to being green - bringing reusable cloth bags to the grocery store, hauling recyclables to the curb each week, changing out light bulbs and reducing waste, to name a few. In 2012 being green is cool and ignoring the environment is not a popular way to live, but one man is raising the bar on being green.

Local Car Dealer For The People, Tony Malito from Budget Car Sales, is taking the green thing to a whole new level in 2012. “Everybody’s talking about going green so I’ve decided to go green my way. I’m making green a heck of a lot more fun by lining my customers’ pockets with everyone’s favorite green - cold hard cash.”

“During my Go Green Go Campaign, I’m offering my customers up to bonus more than their old car is worth when they trade in their car this month.”

When asked about the details of the campaign, Tony Malito from Budget Car Sales explained, “With some green programs, you must buy a hybrid to qualify for savings.”

GREEN LIGHT FOR BAD CREDIT

Take the first step to making your financial goals come true in 2012 at Budget Car Sales - if you don’t have a car to trade, you can still choose a Go Green Go Campaign Bonus of up to $2,700.00 to help your family reach their financial goals in 2012. “It gets even better! Individuals with bad credit can look forward to sensational news at Budget Car Sales,” says Malito.

Malito says, “During the Go Green Go Campaign, not only am I offering up to $4,700.00 bonus for any trade, I’m also giving people with bad credit a chance to get back on track by overlooking bad credit scores. Every customer will be handled with dignity and each credit application will be worked for maximum approval regardless of past credit history. And if you do choose to buy a nicer, newer certified vehicle this month, your past credit problems will stay in the past and we’ll help you make a fresh start for the future. I won’t let past mistakes stand in the way of you getting the nicer, newer car you deserve. I also believe everyone deserves a second chance to go along with that new car!”

“With my For The People® Credit Approval Process, we’ll match you with the lender most likely to approve you today. Like any effective campaign leader, we know how to spin a deal! Let our spin machine match you with the lender most likely to understand your unique situation. Our spin doctors are better than the politicians when it comes to making miracles happen (well, almost),” Malito explained.

At Budget Car Sales, you get the discount regardless of which car you choose to drive - ALL VEHICLES QUALIFY. Pick your favorite and cash in. I know not everyone can afford to drive a fancy hybrid.”

Tony Malito understands that people appreciate help during tough economic times. Malito says,

“A lot of the American people are having to cut back a bit and I want to help them drive a car they love, while gaining the extra cash they need to upgrade their lives and their transportation.”

TOO GOOD TO BE TRUE?

When pressed about why he is throwing out such an amazing offer, paying up to $4,700.00 bonus more for old cars, Malito responded, “My Go Green Go Campaign is a chance for me to give back and a chance for everyday people to get ahead and make their financial goals come true in 2012. I get a stocked lot and keep my business strong. Customers get much-needed cash and the opportunity to drive a nicer, newer car today. It’s a win-win situation for everyone!”

The silver lining behind this campaign is that even the environment gets a boost - between the savings in gas and the improved emission situation, the Go Green Go Campaign helps the planet and the people living on it. That’s something everyone can get behind!

Malito stressed, “I’m not playing around. I believe everyone deserves to drive a nicer,

Some important facts you should know:

Basketball teams provide reasons to smile

ISSUE: Bluegrass basketball successOUR VIEW: Everybody loves a winner

The love for basketball reaches a frenzy this week.

Whether you're caught up in the excitement of the Western Kentucky Hilltoppers unexpected run in the Sun Belt Tournament or the University of Kentucky's yearlong dominance, college basketball's postseason has plenty to make the state proud.

Murray State University enters the men's NCAA Tournament with only one loss and the University of Louisville is ranked among the elite after winning the Big East Tournament in New York City over the weekend.

Kentuckians love basketball for many reason. Success is the most obvious one.

Success is measured in victories, of course, but it's also measured in passion, dedication and team work. Qualities that result in extracting the very best from each participant truly contribute to success and build excellent life patterns.

Right here at home, high school teams demonstrated that very same level of devotion throughout the season. While all deserve recognition for their accomplishments, two teams stand out for recognition.

For the seventh consecutive year, the Elizabethtown High School girls' basketball team reached the 5th Region championship. While derailed by the once-in-a-lifetime collection of talent from state runner-up Marion County, the Lady Panthers again renewed their standard of excellence that's envied across the state.

John Hardin High's boys' basketball team is making final preparation for a Sweet 16 run this week. The Bulldogs march to the district and region championship was marked by tenacity and a never-say-die grit. Regardless of what school you root for, basketball fans can unite proudly behind this collection of champions.

Relish every field goal along the way. Because basketball also is about enjoyment and making memories.

BBB tips on hiring a home contractor

Whether you are looking to have your home windows replaced, new siding installed on your garage or a pool built for the summer months ahead, it's always important to find a home contractor you can trust. Better Business Bureau recommends following this smart shopper checklist before choosing a contractor for your home.

In 2011, BBB received more than 6,000 complaints against general contractors, which was up 11 percent from the previous year. While there are many trustworthy and reliable contractors out there, there always are those unscrupulous few who end up charging too much and doing too little — or nothing at all.

BBB advises consumers to follow this smart shopper checklist before choosing a home contractor:

■ Be picky and have lots of options. Seek at least three bids from prospective contractors based on the same specifications, materials and labor needed to complete the project. Homeowners should discuss bids in detail with each contractor and ask questions about variations in pricing. The lowest-priced contractor may not be the best.

■ Make sure they are certified and insured. Consumers should ask whether the company is insured against claims covering workers' compensation, property damage and personal liability in case of accidents. Consumers should obtain the name of the insurance carrier and call to verify coverage. Ask whether the contractor meets licensing and bonding requirements set by the state, county or city. Check with local authorities to find out whether permits are needed before proceeding with the work. The contractor also should be aware of any required permits.

■ Get everything in writing. Ask whether the contractor will provide a lien waiver upon completion of the job. A lien waiver is a statement by the contractor that all suppliers and subcontractors have been paid for their work. Read and understand the contract before signing. Get all verbal promises in writing. Include start and completion dates in the contract.

Remember the rule of thirds and follow it. Pay one third at the start of the project, one third when work is 50 percent completed and one third after completion.

BBB has Business Reviews on more than 100,000 general contractors across North America, available for free at www.bbb.org or call 1-800-388-2222.

Cat on the loose sends him to the couch

My wife was doubled over, laughing hysterically at me. And I wasn't the least bit amused.

A recent storm had unhinged the door to the crawl space beneath our house. For a few days, our two Schnauzers, Max and Baylor, had been nervously smelling the floor vents. I finally put my ear to one of them and heard it: A faint but unmistakable meow.

A cat was under our house.

My apologies to cat lovers: I am not one of you. Cats and I have an understanding: I don't bother them and they don't bother me.

It's not that I'm actually scared of cats; they just make me nervous. And the closer I get to one, the more uneasy I become. My natural defenses kick in.

DAVID WHITLOCK

If your friendly cat jumps in my lap, I will smile and say, "Nice kitty," but I will be suppressing a flinch. Your lovable pet will put me on edge.

So, OK, maybe I am a borderline feline phobic.

I can trace my cat aversion to my childhood friend's cat. Rex Martin's cat joined us as we were playing under a cardboard table with a sheet over it, pretending it was a secret hide-a-way. All was well until something made his cat want out. I was in the way. Rex was laughing uncontrollably at the specter of his cat wrapped up with me in that sheet, the cat clawing and scratching, me crying and screaming.

The cat eventually did find its way out, but when it was over, a permanent marker had written the words in my memory with large letters: BEWARE OF CATS.

In fact, it took a birthday party with cake and ice cream to coax me back over to Rex's house. Even then, I stood on the doorstep and required the promise of cat security before I would enter.

So, the other night, when I realized a cat was underneath our house, I first tried leaving the crawl space door open, hoping the cat would find its way cat out.

Nothing doing.

Finally, that fateful night, Lori leaned over the vent in our kitchen. "I hear it too," she whispered.

"Poor kitty, probably starving."

Then she did the unthinkable. Pulling the grate off the vent she called, "Here kitty." I stepped back, shaking my head, "no," but before I could warn her not to do that again, she did it, "Here kitty, up here kitty."

Then it happened.

Maybe it was Lori's sweet voice or perhaps it was the smell of dog food to a hungry cat, but it happened.

Suddenly that cat crawled up the vent and into our house. Lori ran to open the door, but the Schnauzers intercepted the cat, chasing the feline fugitive around, under and over the kitchen table.

Where was I? I don't know how I got there, but I was standing on our couch, horrified, palms of my hands on the side of my head screaming,

"There's a cat in our house!"

The cat circled around the couch where I was standing, Max and Baylor in hot pursuit. Lori took one look at this bewildering scene, and like Rex Martin of years ago, howled with laughter.

I was pointing to the grate, thinking one of us should put it back over the vent, forcing the cat out the door. I froze. Lori kept laughing.

And then, as quickly as that cat had emerged from the underworld of my house, it found its way back down, a cat's paw in front of the Schnauzers who screeched to a halt, yapping and peering down the vent at the disappearance of the cat's tail.

Lori was trying to gain her composure. The Schnauzers ran to me, stopped in front of the couch and looked up as if to say, "That was so much fun, can we do it again?"

And there I was:

Standing alone on the couch, feeling like Quasimodo before the crowd, crowned the king of fools.

Some stories have profound moral implications; others are simple reminders that most of us suppress secret, seemingly silly fears deep within our psyche. And sometimes it helps to know that about ourselves. And even admit it. It might make us more understanding of others' anxieties.

In case you're wondering, I, yes even I, finally got the cat out alive from beneath the house and in doing so, somewhat redeemed myself.

But that's another story.

Prisons won't take Kentucky company's military contract

By ROGER ALFORD
The Associated Press

FRANKFORT

Workers at a Campbellsville factory that makes T-shirts for U.S. soldiers won't have to fear losing their jobs to prisoners.

Senate Republican Leader Mitch McConnell said Monday he has received notification that Federal Prison Industries won't bid on the military contract now held by Campbellsville Apparel Co.

"This is another great victory for Kentucky workers," McConnell said in a statement. "Federal Prison Industries did the right thing in backing away from their plan to take away jobs from hard-working Kentucky taxpayers and giving them to convicts."

Campbellsville Apparel President Chris Reynolds was the most recent Kentucky businessman to express fears that Federal Prison Industries might take over the military contract that his firm has held for the past decade.

Reynolds said it's difficult for private companies to compete for contracts with the Federal Prison Industries, which pays inmates from 23 cents to $1.15 an hour.

McConnell intervened on behalf of the Campbellsville plant as well as an Olive Hill company that makes Air Force windbreakers, calling on Federal Prison Industries to back off.

Federal Prison Industries previously announced it wouldn't bid for the Air Force wind breaker contract, citing a "potential adverse impact" on the small northeastern Kentucky city where they're made. That same rationale would hold true for Campbellsville. Both communities have been dealing with high unemployment.

GENTRY: Former educator free on bond

The detective said he has no physical evidence in the case.

Gabhart said Gentry's husband, during a phone interview, advised him the former teacher admitted to having sex with two students. The detective told the court he called Gentry's husband after he reported a verbal domestic incident to a sergeant at Kentucky State Police Post 4 in Elizabethtown that stemmed from the allegations against his wife.

Gabhart said he also took corroborating statements from two students who were present in Gentry's home during several encounters between the 18-year-old and the teacher.

According to these students, they spent the night at Gentry's home, sleeping in a separate room while the 18-year-old slept with Gentry in her bedroom, the detective said. The students reported noises from Gentry's bedroom, he said.

Gabhart told the court he met with Gentry, but she did not make any statements.

Defense attorney Rob Eggert argued Monday all alleged contact between Gentry and the teens was consensual, and the Kentucky law the former teacher is charged with violating uses the word "subjects," requiring "an element of coercion" or "implied coercion," he said.

He also argued the encounter with the 17-year-old occurred during the summer when school was not in session and Gentry had no influence over him. Furthermore, Eggert argued the commonwealth offered no evidence the two came into contact as a result of her job.

"There is no proof and they offered none," he said.

Assistant County Attorney LeShea Smith said the teen was working for Gentry at her home, giving her influence over him.

"They came into contact because she was a teacher at his school," Smith said. "She brought a student from her school to her home."

Though Shumate ultimately ruled the commonwealth met the burden of probable cause, she said it was narrowly met, indicating three issues Eggert raised about consent versus "subjects," the timing of the alleged encounter and whether the two came into contact as a result of Gentry's position.

"I want to give the grand jury and the commonwealth's attorney an opportunity to look at those issues," the judge said.

Gentry was fired from the high school in October after KSP began investigating allegations the English teacher engaged in sexual contact with male students. Superintendent Sam Sanders previously told The News-Enterprise that Gentry's contract with the school district was terminated for "immoral character" and "conduct unbecoming a teacher."

Gentry remains free on 10 percent of a $20,000 bond.

RADCLIFF: 'Right now we're putting money down a rat hole'

Fox said the annual OEA grant for One Knox exceeds $400,000 and local municipalities provide a 10 percent match that hovers around $42,000. Radcliff's funding covers 30 percent of the local match.

Fox last year said the city has paid about $82,000 to One Knox since its inception. Most council members have said they have not seen enough benefit from One Knox's services after BRAC finished to continue funding the agency.

One Knox Executive Director Brad Richardson approached the council last year and explained the significance and merits that still remain for the agency.

Richardson said One Knox helped lead the initiative to secure $251 mil-

■ Susan Mouser of Clauson, Mouser & Co. PSC presented the city's annual audit to the council and said there were no discrepancies or violations to report concerning city finances.

■ Brian Daly, coordinator of the Regional Education Center, said he plans to offer services of some of his graduate students to design an economic development package for the city. The teams will gather data on what the area has to offer and the information businesses would want to know about Radcliff. The analysis also will determine ways to maximize resources already available to Radcliff and determine ways to create revenue streams for the city, he said. Daly said the analysis will take roughly nine weeks to complete and will be offered without charge to the city. Mayor J.J. Duvall said he approached Daly about the idea and wanted to determine how education could play a role in the economic development of the city.

■ Councilman Don Shaw presented the city with a memo regarding the Hardin County Board of Ethics in response to Councilman Edward Palmer's push for a city-established code of ethics after some council members applied for liquor licenses. lion in BRAC-related road, water and sewer projects and about $45 million in direct projects in Radcliff, including wastewater improvements, Radcliff Elementary School, the Bullock Boulevard connector and improvements to Wilson Road.

"(It's) pretty clear that One Knox has been valuable," Richardson said in September.

Richardson also said Fort Knox officials indicated they prefer a single point of reference for various governments and business organizations, and it has benefited local interactions with state government.

Richardson did not return calls Monday seeking comment regarding Radcliff's meeting.

Councilman Stan Holmes said he is not convinced the funding still is needed.

Department of Defense officials have asked lawmakers for additional rounds of BRAC, which Councilman Don Shaw pointed out during Monday's meeting. If the BRAC rounds are not approved, DoD officials have warned they may have to start closing facilities anyway.

Councilman Jack Holland said Radcliff should not continue funding One Knox because of the possibility of another BRAC.

"Let's worry about it then," Holland told the council. "Right now we're putting money down a rat hole."

DEAR ABBY

Consider the consequences for marriage name change

Dear Abby: Like “Standing My Ground in New Jersey” (Jan. 9), I had decided at a young age I had no interest in changing my last name if I were ever to be married. For me, the decision had nothing to do with an established career or a fear of losing myself. I simply never saw the point.

Would you believe I fell in love with and married a man who asked me how I felt about him taking my last name? When he first mentioned the idea, I told him he should think it through because a name change shouldn't be taken lightly. Like “Standing,” my husband also had no father figure. He's happy to now have a last name that finally “means something” to him. — Erin in El Cajon, Calif.

■ Dear Erin: That column produced a wide variety of responses from both men and women. However, most of my readers agree “Standing” and her fiancé have an important decision to make, and they should both step back and examine the options together. Their comments:

Dear Abby: Most women around the world retain their names after marriage, and children take their mother's name as their middle name and their father's name as their last. It's only in English-speaking countries the tradition exists for women to take their husband's last name. It originated from the time when wives were considered property. — Jane in Franklin, Tenn.

Dear Abby: The decision to keep or change one's name is a personal one. In my experience as a judge, I often see women ask for their maiden name to be restored to them upon a divorce. I also saw one case in which the husband in the divorce requested his former name be restored to him. That couple had used the wife's name as their family name when they married.

I agree with your response to postpone the decision until both of them have discussed the issue more fully. How they handle this decision will foretell how they will handle other decisions in the future. — Judge Tonya in Florida

Dear Abby: By “Standing” not changing her name, which is the cultural norm in this country, she will create years of confusion, hassle, constant explanations and identity issues for her, her husband and her future children. Her husband also will feel a sense of disconnect that is hard for her to understand. — Patricia in the Southwest

Dear Abby: “Standing” seems to miss the primary point about entering into a marriage. It's not about standing your ground; it's about meeting in the middle. Not once in her letter did she make a reference to the fact that what she and her fiancé are doing is forming a new family of their own. I kept my maiden name and hyphenated it, but was proud that my husband, children and I all created the “Smith” family. — Susan in Portland, Maine

'TWEEN 12 & 20

I hope your father reads this column

Dr. Wallace: Recently, a girl wrote to you that her parents were divorced about a year ago and her father comes to see her every Saturday morning. This girl stated she loved her father, but it was infringing on her free time to spend four hours every week with him. You suggested the father and the daughter do some meaningful things together at other times during the week. That's a good suggestion, but I think the girl is missing the point. I sure wish I had her problem.

I am 15, and my parents have been divorced for four years. My mom received custody of me, and my dad used to visit me once every two weeks. I really looked forward to seeing him. We would go out to eat, see a movie and go shopping. It was great fun, and I loved my dad very much.

Then my dad met Carolyn, and soon after, he stopped seeing me. Carolyn and my dad are now married, and I haven't heard from him in over two years. He didn't even bother to send me a birthday card on my past two birthdays. I was ill a year ago, and my dad didn't even call to find out how I was doing, even though he was told I was in the hospital. I guess he doesn't care if I live or die. Even though he has forgotten me, I still love him very much.

I'd like to tell this girl to enjoy every minute she shares with her father. These moments can never be replaced. — Nameless, Kansas City, Mo.

■ Nameless: Thanks for

sharing your story with our teen readers. I hope your father reads this column and once again becomes a responsible parent. He was a father long before he met Carolyn.

MY SISTER MEANS WHAT SHE SAYS. Dr. Wallace: I'm 17 and really like a girl who happens to be my 16-year-old sister's best friend. I'd like to ask her out. I'm positive she would say yes because of the way she looks at me. I've “heard it through the grapevine” she wants to go out with me. My problem is my sister. She does not want me dating this girl, and she told me if I do, she would “disown” me as a brother and she would not talk to me ever again. If you knew my sister, you would understand she means what she says. Help. — Jacob, San Luis Obispo, Calif.

■ Jacob: I've changed my mind several times but finally decided you should not date this girl as long as your sister feels this way. It appears your sister is not dating and does not want to “lose” her best friend to a dating situation. But things have a way of constantly changing, and perhaps, in the near future, your sister will be asked out. It could be she might even enjoy double dating with her best friend and you.

ENGINEERS DEPLOYED FROM FORT KNOX COMPLETE 220 PROJECTS IN AFGHANISTAN

KANDAHAR Airfield, Afghanistan — Members of the 533rd Engineer Detachment, Forward Engineer Support Team-Main have completed 220 engineering projects in Afghanistan since deploying from Fort Knox on April 4, 2011. The count is continuing.

Maj. Gen. Kendall P. Cox, commander of Transatlantic Division, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, praised team members March 1 at Kandahar Airfield, Afghanistan.

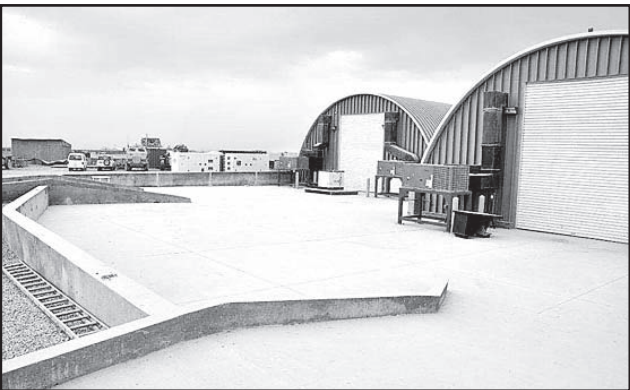

“You guys are phenomenal. Completing 220 projects is huge,” Cox said.

The 533rd FEST-M is a flexible, self-sustaining expeditionary engineering asset task-organized to conduct technical engineering and construction management in combat or contingency environments. The 30 persons deployed include military and civilian team members from various disciplines.

Manned by personnel willing and able to take on challenges that had previously delayed execution

Col. Culen K. Robinson, commander of 533rd Engineer Detachment Forward Engineer Support Team-Main, center, and Sgt. 1st Class Derrick Smikle visit one of Smikle's projects Feb. 15 at Shindand Airbase in western Afghanistan. The Afghan contractor is second from left.

Rain clouds gather Jan. 13 over the much-needed Rigger K-Span flood mitigation project designed on short notice and completed by the 533rd before the beginning of the annual rainy season at Kandahar Airfield, Afghanistan.

of critical projects, the 533rd FEST-M quickly became the “go-to” source for rapid design of Battle

Space projects throughout Afghanistan.

On Jan. 13, 533rd FEST-M engineers were recognized by Col. Lawrence Kominiak, 7th Sustainment Brigade commander for the on-time completion of a much-needed repair project to mitigate flooding around two Rigger K-Span buildings previously constructed near the then undeveloped southwest end of the Kandahar Airfield.

“As airfield development continued southward over the years, drainage problems increased around these two buildings,” said Charles Oliver, Chief Engineer. “We developed a concrete flood wall around the buildings with ramps allowing vehicle access and underground drainage to handle run-off outside the wall and rainfall within the protected area,” he said.

The rains came and the design worked as planned.

The 533rd FEST-M expects to redeploy to Fort Knox around April 1.

March Madness at work creates distraction, diversion

By TOM KISKEN

Scripps Howard News Service

Make no mistake about it: March Madness is a work thing. The announcement of the NCAA men's basketball tournament seeds unleashes a torrent of office pools.

"When the games start, the viewing starts, and when the viewing starts, the work needing to be done stops," said Jack Cullen, president of a Florida firm that surveyed 500 information-technology professionals on the tournament's impact on work and computers.

An online survey by MSN showed 86 percent of respondents said they'll find a way to follow the tournament between or during work assignments. A Chicago study suggests 2.5 million people will check games and scores online each day of the tournament. In Cullen's survey, four of 10 information-technology specialists said the online traffic will affect their computer systems, shutting down networks of more than a third of the affected companies.

Some employers say they have no issue with March Madness, stamping office pools and chats about last-second three-pointers as ways to cultivate camaraderie. But in California's Ventura County District Attorney's Office, for example, not so much.

"We do not allow streaming of music or watching games, because frankly we don't have the bandwidth," said Cheryl Temple, chief deputy district attorney for special prosecutions.

Asked about office pools, Temple cited California Penal Code 337. That's the law that makes betting pools illegal, although a change to the law in 2010 means most pools would be treated as an infraction, not a felony, with a maximum fine of $250.

What it means, according to Temple, is you won't find prosecutors wagering over the Elite Eight.

And if law enforcement learns of office pools at other companies, there will be an investigation, Temple said, citing a provision in the law that compels action.

Employers say if pools emerge, they don't know about them. But some of them see March Madness as a good thing.

"As long as it doesn't cross a line, or as long as it doesn't hinder productivity, I kind of like it," said John Nelson, co-CEO of the Warner Pacific health insurance brokerage in Westlake Village, Calif. "It adds levity."

The line, or at least one of them, is streaming games on desktop computers.

"Our company's computers are not to be used for anything but company-related purposes," said Nelson, "and we stick to those guidelines throughout the year, whether it's March Madness or not."

The IT survey by the Florida-based Modis company indicated 65 percent of respondents said their companies have policies to slow or block online streaming. More than 40 percent said they monitor computer use during March Madness.

The reality is people check games at work.

"That's all part of life now," said Mike Berman, technology vice president at California State University Channel Islands, noting that people not only bring their own home interests to work, but also cart their work home via laptops and smartphone emails. "There isn't that kind of separation there once was. The Internet has brought the world to your desktop. How can you ignore it?"

People figure out different ways to follow the action. There have been times when Delta pilot Bob Garrett has been in the cockpit when his team, Indiana University, takes court.

"We can radio down to the dispatcher, and he can send up scores," said Garrett, who will be flying to Italy when the tourney starts rocking this week.

Lawyer Sandy Robertson of Ventura will rely on her work computer for score updates. Present her with the argument the madness means less productivity and she calls foul.

"I think it creates camaraderie among people who ordinarily you might not have too much in common with," she said. "It just establishes a good feeling around the office, and I think that kind of creates productivity."

Obama seeks to restructure job training programs

The Obama administration wants to streamline federal job search and training programs to make it easier for displaced workers to find new careers.

The White House said the current jumble of federal programs is too confusing for many Americans to know where to get help.

The new plan would combine two existing programs that help workers laid off through no fault of their own as a result of downsizing, jobs moving overseas or other reasons.

It would offer money for retraining, stipends to help with child care or transportation costs, and money for job search and relocation.

Most changes would need congressional approval and about $28 billion over 10 years. The White House says the plan would triple the number of workers who get retraining from 150,000 to nearly 500,000.

'SCHIZOPHRENIC' MARKETS SHRUG OFF GREEK DEAL. U.S. stocks struggled for direction Monday, unsure of what to make of news about Greece's debt workout and eclectic announcements from a few well-known U.S. companies, such as mattress maker Sealy and luxury retailer Michael Kors.

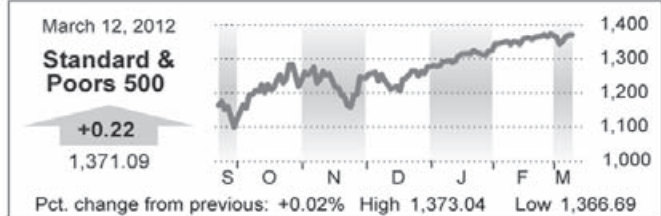

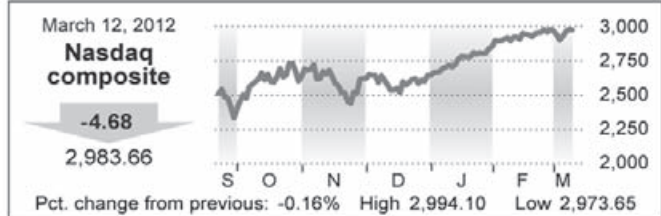

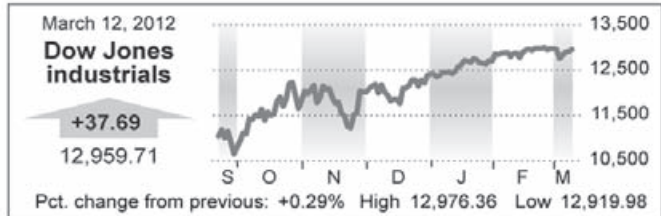

The Dow Jones industrial average and the Standard & Poor's 500 ended the day higher, but the Nasdaq fell. Both indexes wavered between small gains and losses for big chunks of the day.

Pasture cleanup concerns

Recent tornadoes that damaged parts of Hardin, LaRue and several other counties in Eastern Kentucky left many fields and yards covered with all sorts of debris. To say the least, cleanup in these situations is daunting, but for those with livestock pasturing those areas, it can be a very critical, hazardous task.

This is not the first time we've dealt with building debris scattered across the county's landscape, but the task never is easy and there are some facts livestock producers and others helping in the cleanup need to be aware of. In many areas and fields cleanup already has begun, and in those cases this information can be used in future similar situations. The following information has been compiled by numerous sources from the University of Kentucky's College of Agriculture and the Cooperative Extension Service.

Insulation can be a concern when/if cattle consume large pieces. Spun-glass insulation is not digestible in the rumen. It can lead to rumen compaction, blockage, bloating and potentially to abrasions on the rumen wall which can lead to liver abscesses. Small pieces are likely to pass through larger animals with little impact. Large pieces of insulation/debris should be picked up out of pastures to limit risk of digestive problems.

These are suggested guidelines for cleanup of small debris in livestock fields. These guidelines should be disregarded if other official protocols are released.

First priority is human health and safety. Secondary is safe removal of storm debris from fields to reduce the risk to humans and animals. Determine what types of materials are there. Are there areas of high concentrations of debris where it makes more sense to pile debris in several areas versus picking things up as you go? Where will debris be piled after removal from the pasture?

Obviously any downed electrical lines should be removed by trained personnel or authorized individuals prior to anyone going into a pasture; animals should not be loose. This is no place to bring your pet, they could step on metal and require first aid. Be careful not to have too many things going on at once in the same field, such as a team cutting wood with chain saws and a team dealing with insulation – folks can only focus on one task at a time and be efficient and safe.

If you are volunteering in this effort or if you're the property owner here's a list of do's and don'ts:

- Be up to date on your tetanus vaccination.
- Wear sturdy heavy boots – no tennis shoes or sandals.
- Wear heavy gloves no bare hands, wear jeans or long heavy pants – no shorts – and wear long sleeved shirts.
- Don't touch anything with your bare hands. Know your limitations on picking up heavy materials – lift with your legs, keep a straight back at all times.

There are hazards to picking up barbed wire and fencing materials that have nails. Glass shards also may be present when picking up anything, and might not be seen ahead of time. Sharp glass shards, nails, screws, metal bolts, metal shards and needles should be put into plastic buckets or suitable containers. A larger solid container inside a pickup truck can be used to empty buckets as they become heavy or full, or other arrangements can be made.

Regular debris items such as soda pop cans, paper or household items can be placed in plastic trash bags. Containers labeled as any chemical (bleach, pesticides, gasoline, ammonia, etc.) should not be put together in the same trash bag or container.

Remove or downed tree limbs and loose shrubbery, because many are toxic to livestock.

All loose flakes of baled hay, spilled grain or bags of grain need to be removed from pastures, preferably by people wearing N-95 masks because mold likely will have formed, and insulation fibers may be embedded in this material. Avoid raising dust when han-

Farmers needing assistance

Hardin County farmers who need hay and grain should contact the Hardin County Emergency Operations Center at (270) 765-5978. Tell them what is needed and why, for instance, "My cattle are starving because all of my hay is contaminated with insulation and storm debris; I need 50 bales of grass hay as soon as it can get here – I do not have transportation to get it myself."

If the county doesn't have the resources, it can forward the request to the state EOC which has broader resource capabilities.

Use them – that's what they are there for. If you don't ask for help, you won't get it. Likewise, if the agricultural sector doesn't use the EOC, emergency management will never have ag on their radar for disaster response.

To find the contact for another county emergency management, go to <http://kyem.ky.gov/teams/Documents/County%20EM%20Directors%20Contact.pdf>.

dling this material. Situations may vary from a few flakes of hay to 50 square bales that need to be removed.

DONATING ITEMS: There is some local interest in sending agricultural items to disaster impacted counties in Eastern Kentucky – specifically Menifee, Morgan and Johnson Counties where many farms sustained significant damage. Apparently many fences and handling facilities were damaged or destroyed allowing numerous animals to run wild across large areas. Efforts are under way to get fencing, feed and other supplies to these areas in an organized manner. As the effort comes together locally, announcements will be made through local radio and print media so those who have an interest in donating items or money to the relief project can be properly informed.

ASK FOOD

Should you keep a diet a secret?

Food Network Kitchens

Q: What's the best way to ensure weight-loss success: tell friends and other loved ones, or keep it secret?

A: There's no right or wrong way to do it. At the end of the day, to get rid of that gut, you've got to go with your gut.

Research supports that a lack of motivation and accountability is a common barrier to dropping those pounds. That's why weight-loss programs such as Weight Watchers consider meetings and weigh-ins keys to success. On the other hand, some experts argue that you're better off keeping things quiet.

Often times, the mentality that you're "on" or "off" a diet can trip you up. Announcing this to others may make them (consciously or unconsciously) attempt to stifle your progress. Sometimes, just being around those who aren't following a healthy eating plan can be enough to derail you. Those who decide to keep their plans hush-hush believe announcing weight-loss intentions ahead of time can lead to self-sabotage. They also argue there's an additional benefit of showing off your weight loss after the fact.

The only way to successfully lose weight is to make changes and stick to them. For the best results, you've got to decide what tactics will work for you.

FOOD TIPS

How an Iron Chef lost weight quickly

Food Network Kitchens

Before Masaharu Morimoto was an Iron Chef, he was a baseball player in Japan. But when an injury sidelined him at age 18, he turned to his other passion — cooking — and put his exercise routine on the backburner. The chef admits his eating habits were bad: loading up on carbs and skipping the gym.

"It's the most efficient way to gain weight," he joked.

He made five changes recently and lost 40 pounds in just three months.

1. CUT CALORIES. The chef slashed his calorie intake 35 percent by eating smaller meals and taste-testing less while cooking. He also added more fruits and vegetables to his diet.

2. TAKE A WALK. Between filming "Iron Chef America" and running restaurants around the world, Morimoto doesn't have a lot of free time. But now, he puts in about an hour on the treadmill every day and walks to work; it all adds up to three to five miles a day.

3. SWEAT IT OUT. The chef wears a long-sleeve shirt while exercising. "I try to do things that make me sweat," he said. Once, he wrapped his torso in plastic wrap to shed water weight. But he's careful to stay hydrated, of course.

4. SKIP THE BOOZE. Chefs are around alcohol all the time, so it was tough for Morimoto to give up drinking entirely. He still enjoys his favorites — beer, vodka and shochu — but in moderation.

5. COOK AT HOME. Morimoto's wife, Keiko, cooks healthful Japanese dishes for the chef most nights. High-protein tofu has become a staple in Morimoto's new diet; his wife's mashed tofu salad is one of his favorites.

KITCHEN ADVENTURES

When Irish taste buds are smiling

I come from a family that likes to try new things. Several years ago, I decided to make a traditional Irish meal for St. Patrick's Day and it is now a tradition.

Each year's meal usually includes shepherd's pie and Irish soda bread, without raisins, but the sides and dessert often change. Often, my search for new recipes requires research and math. The research involves finding what foods are traditionally Irish and not an American invention, and math because if they are from websites in Ireland a little measurement conversion is needed.

Through research, I discovered a few things. One, eating corned beef and cabbage on St. Patrick's Day is probably an American invention. I found many in Ireland eat bacon with their cabbage rather than corned beef. It's not exactly our kind of bacon, but I believe in the old adage that bacon makes everything better, so I was on board with that idea.

When I made Colcannon, a traditional Irish dish, I added some bacon pieces. Colcannon is a mashed potato and cabbage dish. At first, I was a little hesitant about a dish with cabbage and mashed potatoes mixed. After searching many websites I found this is a very popular dish in Ireland and someone even wrote a song about it.

I gave it a try and the result actually was pretty tasty.

I followed the directions in the recipe but after trying it I realized I might have cooked the cabbage a bit longer. Along with adding bacon to the recipe I also topped it was some Irish cheddar cheese.

For dessert, I served Kerry Apple Cake. This recipe is the one that required some math. Most of the measurements were in ounces or grams instead of cups. But with a little math, and a conversion chart, it didn't take too much work to figure out.

What did take some research were the sugars used, caster and demerara sugar.

Caster sugar is a very fine sugar often used in Britain. Regular granulated sugar worked fine as a substitute.

Demerara sugar is an unrefined large grain sugar that has a yellowish color. I found light brown sugar or granulated sugar can be used as a substitute.

Once I got all my math and sugars worked out the cake wasn't hard to make. Kerry Apple Cake is yummy when served warm with fresh whipped cream but I imagine a scoop of vanilla ice cream works as well.

Maybe with a bit o' luck of the Irish these recipes can create a festive St. Patrick's Day meal.

BECCA OWSLEY

BECCA OWSLEY/The News-Enterprise

An Irish meal of shepherd's pie, colcannon and Irish soda bread.

TRADITIONAL COLCANNON

4 pounds potatoes, or about 7-8 large potatoes (old potatoes or russet potatoes are best, waxy potatoes won't do)
1 green cabbage or Kale
1 cup milk (or cream)

Peel and boil potatoes. Remove the core from the cabbage, slice it thinly and put into a large saucepan. Cover with boiling water and keep at a slow, rolling boil until the cabbage is just wilted and has turned a darker green. This can take 3 to 5 minutes depending on the cabbage.

When the cabbage is cooked, drain it well, squeeze to remove excess moisture and return to the saucepan. Add one third of the butter and cover. Leave it covered and in a warm place, but not on a burner, with the butter melting while you continue.

When potatoes are soft, drain and return saucepan to a low burner, leaving the lid off so any excess moisture can evaporate. When they are dry, add milk to the saucepan along with a third of the butter and chopped

1 stick butter, divided into three parts
4-5 scallions (green onions), chopped
Salt and Pepper
Fresh Parsley or chives
Bacon pieces or bits and Irish cheddar cheese*

scallions. Allow milk to warm but not boil. It is about right when the butter has fully melted and it has started to steam.

With a potato masher or a fork, mash potatoes thoroughly into the butter and milk mixture. Do no pass through a ricer or beat in a mixer as it will make the potatoes gluey.

Mix the cabbage thoroughly through the mashed potato.

Before serving, season with salt and sprinkle with parsley or chives. Make a well in the center of the mound of potato and put the last third of the butter there to melt.

Note: I added bacon to the recipe when the scallions were added and sprinkled the top with Irish cheddar cheese after plating.

KERRY APPLE CAKE

6 ounces butter (1 ½ sticks)
6 ounces caster sugar (¾ cup) — this is a sugar found in the United Kingdom, I used regular granulated sugar
2 eggs, beaten
8 oz self-raising flour (1 cup)
2 medium cooking apples, peeled, cored and chopped
1 teaspoon lemon rind
2 tablespoons demerara sugar — not a sugar commonly used, I used brown sugar but granulated sugar would probably work too
pinch cinnamon
pinch nutmeg

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease and line a 2 pound loaf tin. Cream butter and sugar. Gradually add eggs and flour. Stir in apples and lemon rind. Pour into the tin and sprinkle with sugar and spices. Bake for 1 to 1 ½ hours.

This cake does not keep very well and is best eaten warm with cream, Greek-style yogurt or cheese.

A DASH OF CLASS

An Irish supper no matter your heritage

NORA SWEAT

In four days, those of us with Irish heritage like me, thanks to the Lasley brood, will celebrate St. Patrick's Day. As for the Sweats, we will be remembering our friend, Andy Zagar, who died six years ago on the day we will be wearing green.

Even if your family is not Irish, plan an easy meal for your family. You don't have to do the salad or the dessert, the stew and bread would be enough.

"Erin go braugh," which translates to "Ireland Forever." Happy St. Patrick's Day.

3 tablespoons minced fresh parsley

In a Dutch oven, stew meat in oil over medium-high heat. Add water; bring to a boil. Reduce heat; cover and simmer for 1 hour. Add potatoes, onion, carrot, turnip and seasonings. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat; cover and simmer for 30 minutes or until the vegetables are tender. In a small bowl, combine flour, milk and Kitchen Bouquet until smooth; stir into stew. Add parsley. Refrigerate until set, about 3 hours.

For shamrocks, dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Pour into a greased 11 inch x 7 inch x 2 inch pan. Refrigerate until set, about 3 hours.

Using a 2-inch shamrock shaped cookie cutter, cut plain gelatin into nine shamrocks. Cut first mixture into nine squares; top each with a gelatin shamrock.

MEMORIAL: Beans-and-cornbread fundraiser is March 31

"I think we're here because they were there," she said.

Rogers said getting the park finished in a year will be great, especially because some similar memorials have taken several years to complete.

Rogers is grateful for community support, which increased as the park began to take shape and residents saw there was momentum.

Residents have given money, in-kind donations and volunteered labor that have made the progress possible, she said.

"There are just people coming out of the woodwork," she said.

Rogers said it makes sense that community members have embraced the project.

"Right now, I think the country means so much to us," she said. "It's just a way of saying 'thank you' because we couldn't do anything else. I think the flag still brings a tear to our eye."

She and other organizers will call upon area residents next to the park.

The meal is $5 per person to go toward final improvements planned for the park.

Future plans call for an American flag on a pole and six poles in a line representing each branch of the military and prisoners of war to be set up on the premises.

City officials plan to donate a sign that fits where an old Ashland sign once stood that reads "Welcome to Sonora" on one side and "Thanks for visiting Sonora" on the other.

The flags on the crosses are to be replaced as soon as the weather permits because of wear and tear they have sustained since being placed there in August.

Rogers also hopes to get a roof over the sign to protect it, to put a low rock wall on one side of the park and to add benches on the grass and seats in the gazebo where visitors can sit and remember veterans.

Report: State purchased land at inflated price

The Associated Press

FRANKFORT — Public records show the Kentucky Transportation Department paid an inflated price for land in Columbia that it needed to build a bypass.

The Lexington Herald-Leader reported the state paid more than $1.1 million for land after Adair County banker Randy Murray divided his land and shifted deeds among family and friends to inflate the value of the property. It originally appraised for $673,500.

Transportation Cabinet spokesman Chuck Wolfe told the newspaper the maneuvers were legal in Kentucky.

"The cabinet was well aware of what he was doing but had no practical or legal way to prevent it," Wolfe said. "The only alternative was to cancel a $27 million highway project. Thus, the policy decision was made to settle with Mr. Murray."

The highway project, now known as Veterans Memorial Highway, opened in 2008.

COUNCIL: 'We've got all kinds of things planned'

Planning Director Ed Poppe said the city received 47 resumes for the position. Mayor Tim Walker said a committee has narrowed the selection to two. Walker said the city hopes to offer the job to one of the applicants this week at a starting salary of roughly $38,000.

The new coordinator will manage The Heartland Festival, Cruisin' the Heartland and the Summer Concert Series alongside a planned founder's day celebration on July 4, Walker added.

The coordinator also will work closely with the Historic State Theater, the Elizabethtown-Hardin County Heritage Council and the Kentucky High School Basketball Hall of Fame to market and promote events in downtown Elizabethtown and beyond. Walker said the coordinator also could be asked to bid on new

IN OTHER NEWS

The first two weeks of beer sales in Elizabethtown were massive.

Alcoholic Beverage Control Administrator Tom Reynolds on Monday said 27 outlets armed with beer licenses sold $313,941 worth of malt beverages between Dec. 14 and Dec. 31.

The number, which was outlined in Reynolds' annual report, floored the Elizabethtown City Council and garnered some laughs.

"It was party town E'town, wasn't it?" Councilman Marty Fulkerson said.

"It had been a long, dry spell," Councilwoman Edna Berger joked.

Reynolds also told the council one golf course and 24 restaurants sold about $3.4 million worth of alcohol in 2011.

Reynolds said it is unclear if beer sales have remained as brisk in 2012 and he would be unable to gauge the trend until later in the year.

events, programs and concerts for the city.

"We've got all kinds of things planned," Walker said of the new coordinator.

According to the partnership agreement, ETCB has representation on the committee formed to find a new coordinator and the representative may offer recommendations during the hiring process.

The events coordinator, once hired, is expected to report to the ETCB on a monthly basis at a minimum and provide information on profits and losses for each event, event planning and development, events promotion, participation and attendance numbers, according to the agreement.

The agreement also gives the coordinator the authority to ask for additional funding from the tourism bureau above what has been agreed upon, but the request must be for events not specified in the agreement and be related to new or expanded events.

ETCB also will allocate $100,000 annually through two bi-annual payments for five years, which will be used to support the cost of the coordinator and the events.

This money, however, cannot be used to offset city services used during the event, such as police and parks and recreation services or the use of city-owned rental facilities, the agreement states.

John Hardin junior forward Daveon Greene is averaging 16.3 points and 9.2 rebounds a game while shooting 69.8 percent from the field this season.

Big Greene Machine

John Hardin junior forward gives the Bulldogs an inside presence in the paint

By NATHANIEL BRYAN
nbryan@thenewsenterprise.com

Despite his immense size and gaudy statistics, Daveon Greene is a relative newcomer not only to the John Hardin Bulldogs, but to the sport of basketball in general.

Greene knew little about John Hardin and even less about the Bulldogs' hardwood history before transferring from Ohio last April, less than a month after earning Division-II Southwest All-District special mention honors while playing for Bellbrook.

Consider the 6-foot-2, 240-pound forward a quick learner.

"I just knew I was moving to the area," Greene said before practice Monday afternoon. "I didn't know anything about the area."

What he knows now is that he's good enough to make an immediate impact.

Greene is averaging 16.3 points – partly because he shoots an amazing 69.8 percent from the field – and 9.2 rebounds per game entering Thursday's game against the Johnson Central Golden Eagles (25-10) in the first round of the PNC/KHSAA Boys' Sweet Sixteen Basketball Tournament. Game time is set for 8 p.m. at Rupp Arena in Lexington.

"It is very special because I've never been a part of anything like this," Greene said. "I always wanted to play on Ohio State's court, but now that I'm down here in Kentucky and after having seen UK play, it's a nice opportunity."

So far, Greene has made the most of his opportunities for John Hardin. He opened the season with a 14-point, 12-rebound effort Dec. 6 against 17th District rival Fort Knox before making a statement three days later by punishing the then-reigning region tournament champion Bardstown Tigers with 19 points and 16 rebounds.

"He's a beast. He's a baby (Charles) Barkley," Bardstown coach James "Boo" Brewer said after the game.

His beastly start to his John Hardin career included at least 10 points and at least four rebounds in all 30 games for the Bulldogs (22-8). In the Bulldogs' first five postseason games, Greene averaged 15.6 points and 11.4 rebounds.

Before Greene ever played a game for the Bulldogs, John Hardin coach Mark Wells was already impressed by what he had seen out of the player.

"He showed up toward the end of the school year last year and obviously we were impressed with his size right off the bat," Wells said. "He came out in open gym in the spring and played really hard and showed the ability to go to the basket and post up, so we were pretty excited when we first saw him."

Wells wasn't the only excited individual inside the Bulldogs' camp.

Junior point guard Brandon Price relished the chance at being a part of an inside-outside tandem. The Bulldogs already had a solid outside game with Price and senior Jeremy Harness making up their athletic backcourt, but Greene's arrival has kept defenses honest.

"You could tell from the very first open gym that he had a high IQ and he understood the game. Even then I knew that we could have something special," said Price, the 2012 region tournament MVP and co-record holder for points scored in a 5th Region final. "He brings a big dimension. He's a true post player that opens up everything for the guards. Without him, there's no lanes for me to attack the basket."

While Price has carried the Bulldogs' lately with his scoring, it's Greene who has kept scoring opportunities alive with his offensive rebounding and has halted opposing teams with his work on the defensive glass.

Turn to GREENE, B2

It's been a wonderful year for Wells, his family and his Bulldogs

When John Hardin coach Mark Wells looks back at 2012 years from now, it will always hold a special place in his heart. It's one of those years that will stand out personally and professionally.

Earlier in the year, Wells and his wife, Kristi, found out they were expecting their second daughter. The couple has a daughter, Kiley, who just celebrated her second birthday in February.

A few weeks later, Wells helped guide the Bulldogs to only their second Boys' Sweet Sixteen appearance. The Bulldogs won the 17th District Tournament on

CHUCK JONES

Feb. 25 and then the 5th Region Tournament last Tuesday night at Central Hardin High School.

Things couldn't get much better for the 33-year-old coach, who has been at John Hardin since it opened.

"I'm a truly blessed man," Wells said.

It's hard to argue with Wells' assessment. Need further proof?

When Wells was a high school player in Indiana, he was part of Pike Central High School's only state tournament team his senior year. It was the final year before Indiana went to four classes.

Wells recalls celebrating the championship and being joined on the court by his father and mother, Ron and Diana Wells. Both were on hand when John Hardin knocked off Bardstown to give Wells his first region championship as a head coach.

"My mother and father were on the court following the (Bardstown) win, so it brought back a lot of memories," Wells said.

"My mother asked me, 'How does this compare?' They both are very special, but this one is more rewarding because of the kids."

The Bulldogs haven't been to the state tournament since 2006. Wells is quick to deflect praise to the players and his assistants, but Wells deserves some of the credit as well.

"We have a great coaching staff," John Hardin sophomore guard Keon Williams said. "Coach Wells does a super job. He prepares us for everything, so we're ready for whatever the other team does."

Wells has proven he was the right man for the job when Artie Braden, who started the program, left for Nelson County.

When he first arrived at John Hardin, Wells served as the girls' freshman coach the first year and the freshman and JV coach the following year. He moved to the boys' program where he was the freshman coach for three years and the JV coach for two.

In four years as the head coach, Wells has a 78-33 record. He has guided the Bulldogs to four consecutive winning seasons and the region tournament three times.

And to think, Wells didn't want to leave Indiana at first.

"Kristi and I came here and I was kind of unwilling to come to Kentucky," Wells said. "I'm a man of strong faith in God. With the job market, we were both looking for jobs. But to see where I'm at 11 years later in basketball and in life, I'm so thankful. It's been a blessing."

It's been a wonderful year for Wells, and it is only getting started.

Hall leads young Golden Eagles

By NATHANIEL BRYAN
nbryan@thenewsenterprise.com

In most of Johnson Central's contests, the young Golden Eagles' game plan has been simple and effective: Get the ball to Shane Hall.

Despite his youth, the sophomore forward has put the 15th Region Tournament champion Golden Eagles (25-10) on his tall shoulders and carried them. The 6-foot-8 Hall is averaging 17 points and 10.7 rebounds per game – up from 9.2 points and 8.5 rebounds per game as a freshman – heading into Thursday night's game with the 5th Region champion John Hardin Bulldogs in the first round of the PNC/KHSAA Boys' Sweet Sixteen Basketball Tournament at Lexington's Rupp Arena.

In last week's 65-45 win over East Ridge in the region final, Hall poured in 34 points – making all 10 of his free throws – and grabbed nine rebounds in front of many college scouts, including Indiana coach Tom Crean.

"Shane Hall is one of those guys who can take over a game and put on a show," Johnson Central coach Tommy McKenzie told The Appalachian News-Express. "He put on a show. What a performance. It's unfair to ask a kid to score 25 points and grab nine rebounds, but we can ask that of him and he can do it. And when he does, we are a much better team. He does so much in transition and moves well in the half court. He is 6-foot-8 and has a lot of speed and is really tough. He shoots well and has the ability to change the game. He put on a championship performance tonight."

Hall has been putting on performances like that for a while, which has led to coaches from at least four other Division-I schools in addition to Indiana – Indiana State, Marshall, Purdue and Xavier – making the long drive to eastern Kentucky to watch him in person.

One of those coaches could have seen

Hall at his best Feb. 16 against visiting Prestonsburg as Hall had 19 points, 19 rebounds, 11 blocks, two assists and two steals in just the second triple-double in program history.

According to various recruiting websites, Hall also has interest from Alabama, Butler, BYU, Cincinnati, Clemson, Eastern Kentucky, Florida and Morehead State.

Although none have been official visits, Hall has taken in on-campus games or events at Cincinnati, Eastern Kentucky, Indiana, Morehead State, Purdue and Xavier.

"It's pretty awesome. I have a bunch of big schools recruiting me and I get to go to games for free and stuff. I didn't get to do that before I started getting recruited," Hall told recruiting analyst Evan Daniels for a Feb. 20 article on scout.com. "I didn't think I'd ever get to talk to big coaches like Tom Crean."

Hall first made national recruiting waves in June with a breakout performance in the 2011 Super Soph All-American Camp at Woodward Academy in College Park, Ga.

"Hall is a highly competitive power forward who plays with great energy and urgency," wrote ESPN recruiting analyst Reggie Rankin in a June recap of the Super Soph Camp. "He has an excellent basketball IQ as well. Hall is sneaky athletic and does a great job attacking the rim from the high post or along the baseline, where he will finish above the rim with a clear path. He uses his great hands to rebound and touch to finish through contact on a consistent basis."

While he's their most consistent threat, Hall's not the only weapon. Six other players average at least five points per game for Johnson Central, which averages more than 60 points per game and has three players who have buried more than 20 3-pointers.

Freshman point guard Braxton Blair averages 8.3 points 2.4 rebounds per game, while freshman guard Dalton Adkins (7.3 points per game, 1.2 rebounds per game), senior guard Matt Gallagher (6.3, 3.6), sophomore guard Slade McPeck (5.6, 3.2), freshman post Truman Salyer (5.6, 2.9) and senior post Chad Collins (5.4, 3.6) all score more than five points per game.

While the Golden Eagles and Bulldogs did not play in the regular season, they do have at least one local tie who can give them a scouting report on Hall. Hall is an AAU teammate with Hardin County native shooting guard Khalil Rasheed, who sat out this season for North Hardin after transferring from John Hardin.

Johnson Central is appearing in the Sweet Sixteen for the first time since losing to eventual champion Jeffersonton in 2006. In their previous trip, the Golden Eagles also lost to the eventual champ, falling to Elizabethtown in the 2000 elite eight.

GREENE: ready for first trip to State

"Every rebound is his," Price said. "It's a matter of will and if he wants the rebound, then he usually gets them. That gives us a lot of second-chance points, so he's a big part of our offense."

What few people know is just how little organized basketball Greene has played compared to his teammates. He was a football player until sixth grade, when he said he was tricked into going to basketball tryouts after he said his friends had told him the event was for their upcoming pee-wee league Super Bowl instead.

Based on his frame, the comparisons to a football fullback, linebacker or defensive end are common, Greene said.

He might have been a bit peeved at his buddies' deception more than five years ago, but he shouldn't be disappointed with his personal development.

"I'm not surprised by it," he said. "I get that (linebacker stuff) a lot and I like it, because it makes it a big challenge for me."

What hasn't been a challenge, Greene said, is getting acclimated to his new home so quickly.

While this week's trip to Rupp Arena will be special, he said it's not his top accomplishment so far.

"Just the success we've had," he said. "And this group of guys over there. They've helped me and they've motivated me a lot."

Knight steps out of his dad's shadow

For three seasons and counting, people have gone out of their way to highlight the differences between Pat and Bob Knight. The resemblance, though, never seems stronger than when one or the other starts growling.

So go to YouTube, cue up the video of Pat Knight's nearly 8-minute rant about the seniors on his Lamar basketball team, then close your eyes and tell me he doesn't sound exactly like his dad. At one point, he even threatens to behave like the old man, too.

"When I played, if you acted the way some of these guys did, you got shoved in a locker with a forearm up against your neck and told: 'You don't do that. That's not how we do things at Indiana,'" he said. "And that's what we need."

Whatever it was Lamar needed to get back on track, consider it done. Since Knight's postgame dressing-down in late February — after a dispirited loss at home to Stephen F. Austin — the Cardinals have won six straight behind those same seniors and grabbed one of the last rungs of the NCAA Tournament ladder. Lamar plays Vermont on Wednesday in Dayton, Ohio, with the winner facing mighty North Carolina in nearby Greensboro two nights later. No matter where this experiment in tough love ends, the younger Knight considers it a success already.

"The thing I learned from my first job is you can't coach scared," Knight said Monday after getting off the plane in Dayton. "What I did at Texas Tech was worry about the consequences — what the media thinks, what the fans say — instead of what's best for your program. And so two weeks ago, we'd just been having this horrible couple of days, I told my assistants before I went into the interview room, 'I'm going to get these guys' attention. I'm going to call them out to the media, really throw them under the bus and see what the response was.'

"I knew they were tough enough to do it," he added, then paused. "And they did."

Few things are more fascinating than watching a son step out of his father's shadow, but for most of his adult life, Pat Knight barely seemed to be trying. He played basketball for Bob at Indiana, and spent only one of his eight seasons as a college assistant with somebody else in charge. He inherited his first head coaching job from his father — at Tech, two-thirds of the way through the 2008 season — and employed the same motion offense and man-to-man defensive principles that Bob Knight pioneered and stubbornly stuck with for decades. The son earned his first ejection as the Red Raiders' boss just three games into the next season, storming back out of the tunnel right after getting tossed to continue the argument.

Soon after, though, reports out of Lubbock painted a different Pat Knight. He was much more subdued than his father had been in his heyday, especially around refs, and willing to experiment with an up-tempo style of play and even the occasional zone defense. But halfway measures produced middling results and he got fired at Tech with a 50-61 record and zero invites to the NCAA tournament. He was hired by Lamar less than a month later, prompting critics of both Knights to suggest the small Southland Conference school was simply looking to cash in on the family name. If so, Knight didn't care.

"I've never really looked at the downside. I'm not going to be one of those guys on reality TV or in rehab because my parents were famous. I hate to see that on TV. I am Bob Knight's son," he said defiantly at his introductory news conference. "I'm proud of it."

Gumm wins Georgia tourney

By JOSH CLAYWELL
jclaywell@thenewsenterprise.com

Lydia Gumm didn't have the best weekend on the links, but the North Hardin High School senior did just enough to win her second International Junior Golf Tour championship of the season.

Gumm fired a two-day total of 156 (78-78) to win the IJGT Border Battle at Callaway Gardens Resort's Mountain View course in Pine Mountain, Ga., on Sunday.

"The course was really tough," Gumm said Monday evening. "They host a PGA tournament every year, so it was a challenge. But it was a nice course. I really liked the layout. It was really pretty. Unfortunately I didn't play well. My ball striking wasn't that good, but to come away with a win anywhere is a big accomplishment."

Callaway Gardens Resort hosted the PGA Tour's Buick Challenge until 2002.

Gumm won the title by 12 strokes over Texas resident Kelsi McKee, who finished with a two-day total of 168. Angelica Harris (Harvey, La.)

was third with a 184, while Victoria Nichols (Lowell, Ind.) finished fourth at 210.

Gumm led by six shots entering Sunday's final round. Her day got off to a rough start as she triple bogeyed the fourth hole.

"I just knew I needed to bounce back," Gumm said. "I still had a bunch of holes left. I just never got it going. I had a horrible round of the first nine. It was a struggle on the front nine yesterday. It was just a rough few days."

Gumm finished 10-over on the front nine, but regrouped when she birdied the sixth hole. She made two more putts for birdie on the back side.

Gumm said it was a struggle to make putts, but said her driver was working well.

"I drove the ball fairly decent," she said. "I missed a lot of greens and didn't make very many putts. It was definitely a good experience. Getting to play a course like that is a blessing."

WKU has redefined what a long shot is DAYTON, Ohio — A losing record. Two head coaches in three months. A fan base so disinterested that only 2,000 showed up for a dollar-ticket promotion, one that ended with the most bizarre loss of all.

Western Kentucky has spent an entire season redefining the long shot.

The Hilltoppers (15-18) pulled off one of the most remarkable turnarounds, going from a down-and-out team to one that's ready to open the NCAA Tournament before a presidential audience tonight against the Mississippi Valley State Delta Devils.

Looking for the tournament's biggest underdog? Can't top the Hilltoppers.

"A lot of people are underestimating us," freshman guard Derrick Gordon said.

Kentucky women earn No. 2 seed

By COLIN FLY
The Associated Press

LEXINGTON — A record start and Southeastern Conference regular season title overcame the Kentucky Wildcats' recent stumble.

"It's really a historic night for us," coach Matthew Mitchell said. "It's the first time in our school's history that the women's program has been in three straight tournaments. It's the first time we've ever gotten a seed this high. It's a great night for us."

Kentucky (25-6) matched its highest seed ever in the NCAA women's tournament when it received the two seed in the Kingston region on Monday night.

The Wildcats also received a two seed in 1982. This group will play 15-seed McNeese State (26-7) on Saturday afternoon in Ames, Iowa. The winner will face either Green Bay or the host, Iowa State, in the second round Monday.

"It'll be one of the better first- and second- round places to play in terms of the fans being interested," Mitchell said. "It's real exciting."

The Wildcats gathered in Mitchell's basement around a large, circular leather couch and were boisterous after learning their fate.

"We were excited. We're always excited," guard Keyla Snowden said. "It's a huge tournament. We're glad to be a part of it."

The joy might be short lived — the No. 1 seed in their region is Connecticut.

"I'm not too worried about them, of course, we're worried about ourselves," said Kentucky forward Samarie

Reds' Arroyo, Cubs' Marmol struggle

The Associated Press

MESA, Ariz. — At least Cincinnati Reds pitcher Bronson Arroyo and Chicago Cubs reliever Carlos Marmol have plenty of time to work out the kinks.

Arroyo was hit hard and Marmol also struggled during Chicago's 8-6 spring training win over Cincinnati on Monday.

Arroyo pitched two innings and was charged with four runs and six hits, including a monster home run by Alfonso Soriano. The crafty right-hander, who was 9-12 with a 5.07 ERA last season, struck out one and walked two.

"I faced 12 batters and they squared up six balls and the other balls they didn't square up were base hits and the umpire gave me a strike three that wasn't even a strike," said Arroyo, who is 0-1 with a 9.00 ERA in five spring innings. "That's not a good outing."

Reds manager Dusty Baker didn't seem too concerned.

"Arroyo's velocity was better," Baker said. "He didn't have location today. He'll get better. When (Arroyo) had problems last year it was walks and home runs. That's what got us today."

But there was some good to come out of it.

"It was a struggle out there, even physically I didn't feel real lively," Arroyo said. "It is nice sometimes to get runners on base in situations where you have to press in a real game. Where you have to dig deep and have to throw a fastball on the outer half to a lefty when you feel like you don't have great command. That feeling is something that needs to be worked through."

HORSE RACING

Derby road has hockey flavor

RICHARD ROSENBLATT
The Associated Press

Every now and then an NHL star or a hockey team inspires a racehorse owner.

There have been several horses named for Wayne Gretzky (The Great Gretzky, Gretsky, Gretskyschattrick) and one for the 1980 U.S. Olympic hockey team (Believeinmiracles).

Barry Schwartz, the former chairman of the New York Racing Association and a lifelong Rangers fan, owns or has owned horses named Henrik, Sean Avery and O Shanny — for goalie Henrik Lundqvist and former Rangers Sean Avery and Brendan Shanahan.

Now comes Howe Great, a 3-year-old colt on the road to the Kentucky Derby named for Hall of Famer Gordie Howe. Barry Irwin, whose Team Valor International owns the horse, came up with the name for the son of Hat Trick. It's also a nod to the Gordie Howe hat trick — a goal, an assist and a fight in the same game.

Howe Great moved into the latest Associated Press Run to the Roses Top 10 at No. 10 following his one-length victory over Dullahan in the Palm Beach Stakes at Gulfstream Park on Sunday. Although the race was on turf, Irwin and trainer Graham Motion will be looking at the May 5 Derby (run over dirt) if the colt runs well in his next start, the Blue Grass Stakes at Keeneland on April 14. Howe Great has won four in a row,

AP RUN TO THE ROSES TOP 10

- 1. Union Rags (Michael Matz, trainer; Julien Leparoux, jockey): Worked 4 furlongs in 50.76 seconds over the weekend at Palm Meadows in first breeze since Fountain of Youth (G2) win. ... Next start: Florida Derby (G1), Gulfstream, March 31. ... Derby future wager odds: 4-1.
- 2. Hansen (Mike Maker, Ramon Dominguez): Near-white colt back in Kentucky after Gotham (G3) win. ... Next start: Wood Memorial (G1), Aqueduct, April 7. ... Odds: 9-1.
- 3. El Padrino (Todd Pletcher, Javier Castellano): Risen Star (G2) winner may be Pletcher's top Derby horse. ... Has won three of five starts, 2-for-2 this year. ... Next start: Florida Derby. ... Odds: 12-1.
- 4. Creative Cause (Mike Harrington, Joel Rosario): Won San Felipe (G2) against tough field. ... Norfolk (G1) winner was third behind Union Rags and Hansen in BC Juvenile (G1), and third in San Vicente (G2) in 3-year-old debut. ... Next start: Santa Anita Derby (G1), Santa Anita, April 7. ... Odds: 17-1.
- 5. Gemologist (Pletcher, Castellano): Change in plans keeps colt out of Rebel (G2) and in Florida for 3-year-old debut. ... Was 3-for-3 as 2-year-old, winning Kentucky Jockey Club (G2) in all on the turf.

Irwin and Motion took a similar approach last year before winning the Derby with Animal Kingdom.

Union Rags and Hansen remained 1-2, while Creative Cause moved in at No. 4 following a three-quarters of a length win in the San Felipe Stakes at Santa Anita over the weekend.

The San Felipe was one of the deepest Derby preps to date, with trainer Bob Baffert's Bodemeister finishing second and Midnight Transfer running third. Bodemeister is No. 7 this week. Another Baffert Derby hopeful, Liaison, was fourth in the race and dropped out of the Top 10.

In other preps over the weekend, Prospective won the Tampa Bay

November. ... Next start: 1-mile allowance, Gulfstream, Friday. ... Odds: 23-1.

6. Alpha (Kiaran McLaughlin, Dominguez): Withers (G3) winner worked 5 furlongs in 1:01.20 Saturday at Palm Meadows. ... Next start: Florida Derby. ... Odds: 18-1.

7. Bodemeister (Bob Baffert, Rafael Bejarano): Ran a strong second in San Felipe in third career start. ... Named for Baffert's youngest son, Bode. ... Next start: Santa Anita Derby. ... Odds: 29-1.

8. Secret Circle (Baffert, Bejarano): Worked 6 furlongs in 1:11.60 Saturday at Santa Anita. ... Won division of Southwest (G3) for fourth win in five starts. ... Next start: Rebel, Oaklawn, Saturday. ... Odds: 37-1.

9. Mark Valeski (Larry Jones, Rosie Napravnik): Risen Star runner-up has two wins in four career starts. ... Next start: Louisiana Derby, Fair Grounds, April 1. ... Odds: 38-1.

10. Howe Great (Graham Motion, John Velazquez): Won Palm Beach (G3) on turf over Dullahan. ... Has won four in a row on turf, but will be considered for Derby (on dirt). ... Next start: Blue Grass (G1), Keeneland, April 14. ... Odds: 3-1 (mutuel field).

Keep An Eye On: Dullahan, I'll Have Another, My Adonis, News Pending, Prospective.

Derby by three-quarters of a length over Golden Ticket and will likely make his next start in the Wood Memorial, and Trinniberg won the Swale Stakes at Gulfstream, with 6-5 favorite Ever So Lucky third.

Gemologist, No. 5 this week, will make his 3-year-old debut Friday in an allowance race at Gulfstream instead of the Rebel Stakes at Oaklawn Park on Saturday.

The Rebel field, meanwhile, will include Kid Sidney, a possible reference to Penguins star Sidney Crosby. The colt is a son of Lemon Drop Kid, out of the mare Sidneys Angel Face, and the current owners are not sure if the breeders had Crosby in mind when they named the horse.

NASCAR

Will Knaus be seen as a cheater or an innovator?

By JENNA FRYER
The Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — The court of public opinion has long been divided on Chad Knaus. Depending on who you ask, the crew chief is a world-class cheater, a masterful innovator, or maybe a combination of both.

An appeals committee will get its say today, when Knaus goes before the National Stock Car Racing appeals panel to fight a six-race suspension handed down by NASCAR after five-time champion Jimmie Johnson's Daytona 500 car failed its first inspection.

Many believe his reputation is at stake.

It's not.

Those who follow NASCAR made up their minds about Knaus somewhere around suspension one, two, three or four.

Besides, he doesn't much care what anyone thinks about him.

"As far as my reputation goes, I'm not too concerned about that," he said. "What we want to do is go out there and do the best thing we can for Hendrick Motorsports, the best thing for (sponsor) Lowe's and try to win races and championships."

Nobody has been better at that than Knaus over the last decade.

He guided Johnson to a record five-straight championships and 53 victories since the two were paired in 2002 by team owner Rick Hendrick. Knaus is not credited with two other victories Johnson earned while Knaus was suspended, including, the 2006 Daytona 500.

Knaus had been kicked out of SpeedWeeks by NASCAR in '06 for alterations found on the car following Johnson's qualifying lap.

It's been a long time since Knaus last broke any rules. This latest incident is actually Knaus' first infraction since 2007, when he sat out six races for flaring out the front bumpers of Johnson's car at Sonoma. But, should it stand following today's appeal, it will be his fourth suspension as a crew chief since 2001. A two-race suspension in 2005 was reduced on appeal to 90 days probation.

So how does this keep happening? And is Knaus really arrogant enough to believe he can pull a fast one on NASCAR's inspectors time and time again?

Doubtful.

Knaus is one of the most driven crew chiefs in NASCAR history, and no one would deny he's made tremendous personal sacrifices in his quest to not just win every race entered, but to embarrass the competition while doing so. He's 40 years old, single, childless and eats, sleeps and breathes racing.

So focused on being the very best, Knaus' decision to skip preseason testing this January to instead take an African safari was considered news.

Knaus makes it his personal mission to find every gray area in the NASCAR rule book and exploit it to his gain. When it landed him in hot water time and time again, he had to re-evaluate his approach and inch closer to the line of acceptability.

TENNIS

Djokovic, Sharapova win at Indian Wells

The Associated Press

INDIAN WELLS, Calif. — Top-ranked Novak Djokovic defeated Kevin Anderson 6-2, 6-3 to reach the fourth round of the BNP Paribas Open on Monday, improving his match record to 12-1 this year.

Djokovic broke Anderson's serve once in each set playing in the heat of the day at the Indian Wells Tennis Garden, where he won in 2008 and last year when the Serb claimed three Grand Slam titles and went 70-6. Djokovic successfully defended his Australian Open title to open the year.

Anderson, the 29th seed from South Africa who won last week's tournament in Delrey Beach, Fla., managed one break in the first set. Five games went to deuce, including five deuces before Djokovic held to lead 3-2 in the first. Djokovic beat Anderson in straight sets for the fourth straight time.

In the day's biggest upsets, No. 6 seed Sam Stosur lost to 30th-seeded Nadia Petrova 6-1, 6-7 (6), 7-6 (5) in a rematch of their three-set U.S. Open marathon last year. That was the longest women's match since the tiebreaker was introduced, with Stosur winning on her way to claiming the title.

On the men's side, eighth-seeded American Mardy Fish was beaten 6-3, 6-4 by qualifier Matthew Ebden of Australia, with Fish getting penalized for hindrance.

No. 2 Maria Sharapova defeated Simona Halep of Romania 6-3, 6-4 in their first career meeting. Sharapova is one of three former winners remaining in the field, with Caroline Wozniacki and Ana Ivanovic also in the bottom half of the draw.

Francesca Schiavone became the eighth player to withdraw because of a viral illness sweeping the Coachella Valley.

The Italian retired after losing the first set 6-2 to Lucie Safarova of the Czech Republic. The tournament's medical provider said the virus causes nausea, vomiting and fever and is being transmitted by air.

No. 19 Louisville women will face Michigan State

The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE — No. 19 Louisville was awarded a seven seed in the NCAA women's tournament after and up-and-down season.

The Cardinals (22-9) will play 10th-seeded Michigan State (20-11) in College Park, Md. on Saturday. The winner will face either the host Maryland Terrapins or Navy in the second round of the Raleigh region.

Louisville has lost several key contributors because of season-ending injuries, including Monique Reid and Tia Gibbs. The Cardinals are led by guard Shoni Schimmel, who averages 14.3 points per game.

"I think we've got a good draw," Snowden said. "Just being in the tournament shows a lot of where we've come over the last Several players leapt off the couch in joy in Mitchell's Kentucky blue painted basement on Lexington's east side.

Mitchell sat at a table just behind them smiling, while his daughter, Lacy, and assistant coach Matt Insell filled out brackets.

Kentucky had been a

No. 4 seed each of the previous two seasons before this year's success, a rapid rise during Mitchell's tenure that culminated this season with a regular-season league title over long-time powerhouse Tennessee.

"It's really remarkable where we've gotten in a relatively short period of time," Mitchell said. "Four years ago, we're not in the tournament. Three years later, you're a No. 2 seed. It's been a lot of hard work from a lot of people, particularly these players."

Walker, who transferred from UConn. "That's what I'm worried about, us getting better as a team. I'm going to be excited (if we meet them) because that means we're in the Elite Eight."

Kentucky is bolstered by SEC Player of the Year A'dia Mathies, who averages 15.7 points per game.

"I'm just very excited,"

Mathies said. "Another year to be able to play in the NCAA Tournament."

Kentucky started with wins in 21 of its first 23 games, including 10 straight wins to start SEC play before it faltered down the stretch with losses in three of its final six conference games and a loss to LSU in the SEC Tournament semifinals.

But the Wildcats have several quality non-conference wins, including against Duke and Louisville, and the two seed wasn't too far of a reach de-

With good reason. They've spent most of the season playing down to the lowest estimates.

A young team, featuring seven freshmen, Western Kentucky lost 11 of its first 16 games. The low point came Jan. 5, when Louisiana-Lafayette somehow managed to get six players on the floor for the final shot in a 72-70 overtime win.

And that wasn't even the most embarrassing thing about that game. The school offered $1 tickets to lure back fans, and only 2,137 decided the Hilltoppers were worth a buck.

The next day, coach Ken McDonald was fired, replaced by assistant Ray Harper. The Hilltoppers responded by losing their next three games.

"I'm pretty sure everybody's minds were like going crazy," said senior guard Kahlil McDonald. "But it shows how tough we are because we got through it and we got a conference championship. And now we're here."

Harper and his staff had little going right.

"We weren't a very good basketball team," Harper said. "We weren't playing very well."

Harper emphasized improvement each day, and got it. The Hilltoppers toughened on defense, won a few games, gained some confidence and pulled off a fantastic finish, winning their last six games, including four in four days at the Sun Belt Tournament.

They're the first team since Coppin State in 2009 to reach the tournament with a losing record. They're only the fourth team since 1997 to reach the NCAA Tournament after a midseason coaching change, according to STATS LLC.

Wisconsin made the tournament in 2001, after coach Dick Bennett retired three games into the season. Utah did it in 2004, when Rick Majerus was hospitalized during the season and left because of his health. Indiana played in the 2008 tournament after Kelvin Sampson was fired in February for rules violations.

Few teams recover from a coaching change, which says something about these Hilltoppers.

"They've learned some lessons that will carry them, help them much longer than the basketball season," Harper said. "It's going to help them through life, that there will be tough days, but you must stay and believe."

They felt at home for their workout Monday evening at University of Dayton Arena. Twenty-one fans stretched out in the stands to watch their hour-long practice, which began with the public address announcer introducing the team.

"Ladies and gentlemen," the announcer said, his voice filling the arena,

"please welcome the Hilltoppers to the court." A few fans applauded. Harper stood and midcourt with arms crossed, working over a wad of gum while his players passed and shot in an otherwise quiet arena.

Yes, still underdogs.

They'll take their six-game winning streak against Mississippi Valley State (21-12), which won 17 in a row during the season and will be trying for its first NCAA Tournament win in school history. The Delta Devils are 0-4 all-time.

Not only will they open the 68-year tournament together, they'll also have the nation's highest-ranking basketball fan in the stands — President Barack Obama, who loves to play and picks an NCAA Tournament bracket each season. Obama and British Prime Minister David Cameron are flying in on Air Force One to watch the game.

Last year, Obama picked all four No. 1 seeds to reach the Final Four, with Kansas winning it all.

Instead, Connecticut — a long shot at the start of the tournament — came away with its third national title.

A year later, Obama will get to watch the tournament opener, which includes the longest of long shots.

"Now, that's an experience," Mississippi Valley State coach Sean Woods said. "We can embrace that.

How many times do you get the President to come watch you play? But even then, Western Kentucky is still trying to beat your butt. So let the President enjoy how hard you play and how good you play together, so he can have something good to say about you."

JUMBLE

Unscramble these four Jumbles, one letter to each square, to form four ordinary words.

Print answer here:

(Answers tomorrow)

Yesterday's Jumbles: HEDGE AVOID LETTER HORRID
Answer: When she needed to get to the hospital in a hurry, she called a cab to — DELIVER HER

Fast-food dining: It cost what?

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Hello, Heloise: My hint is about checking your fast-food receipt. I was at the drive-thru window, and my order total was $5.38. The guy handed me my order with a receipt. Later that day, I glanced at the receipt. It was for $16.74!

Since I had charged it, I called the restaurant and asked the manager to go through the morning's receipts to get everything straightened out. The guy simply handed me the wrong receipt, but I spent a lot of time worrying and trying to figure all this out. — Catherine D. in Pennsylvania

Good hint, and a reminder to check all receipts before leaving.

EASY WEAR. Dear Heloise: I've been reading and enjoying Hints From Heloise for years, and I would like to pass on this hint: If I have worn a garment for only a few hours and it's not really "dirty," I rehang it in my closet inside-out.

Later, when I am looking for something to wear, I can easily spot and give first consideration to any lightly worn garments. This cuts down on unnecessary laundry, saving both money and labor. — Jami J., Corona, Calif.

ENERGY LOSS. Dear Heloise: One thing I have noticed that causes a large amount of unnecessary energy loss is leaving exhaust fans, especially in bathrooms, running too long or in some cases all day. People don't realize that exhaust fans pull heated or air-conditioned air out of the building or into the attic.

This air has to be reheated or cooled, which uses lots of energy and adds to energy costs. — Ruben T., Amarillo, Texas

WASHER REPAIR. Dear Heloise: To my dismay, the water pump on my washing machine failed. The cause of failure was not the product but the operator — me. Imagine my surprise and shock when the repairman pulled the underwires from a bra out of the pump. He presented me with a mesh bag to use from that day forward to contain the bras, as well as any small items. So, ladies, be warned. That was an expensive bra. — A California Reader, via email

SAVE A SPIDER. Dear Readers: March 14 is National Save a Spider Day. Not everyone likes spiders (I don't want to find one in my bed), but they are useful to have around. They eat household pests such as flies, mosquitoes and ants.

And many people do have them as "pets," as I have learned. So, it's your call "to let the spider be, or not to be!"

WIRELESS TECHNOLOGY.

Dear Readers: If you're not tech-savvy or are a nervous newbie in the wireless electronic world, head to an electronics store to see what might simplify your life.

Wander around and see what's new. Ask your friends and younger folks for recommendations about what products and gadgets might help you in your everyday life.

Write to Heloise at P.O. Box 795000, San Antonio, TX 78279-5000, or fax to (210) HEL-OISE. King Features Syndicate Inc.

Steve Harvey is going to star in his own daily television show, and it's going to be taped in Chicago.

In a news release, Gov. Pat Quinn said the comedian, actor, author and radio host will host a one-hour program called "Steve Harvey" at the NBC 5 studios in Chicago.

Quinn says the program will create about 100 jobs and could bring about 35,000 audience members and visitors to the city each year.

The release says Harvey will cover a host of topics, from parenting to relationships to navigating today's workplace.

It was Sunday "fun day" for Beyonce and Jay-Z: The new parents enjoyed a concert by R&B singer The-Dream in New York.

The top music couple jammed to the singer-songwriter in the VIP section of SOB's, a small club that houses a few hundred people.

The-Dream co-wrote and co-produced Beyonce's massive hit "Single Ladies (Put a Ring on It)." He also worked his magic on Rihanna's "Umbrella," Justin Bieber's "Baby" and "Touch My Body" by Mariah Carey.

IN THE STARS

HAPPY BIRTHDAY: Make changes for the right reason. Impulsive action can cause work-related problems. Sticking to your plans to ensure that your responsibilities are properly met should be your prime concern. Develop skills that will allow you to offer more to clients, employers or anyone with whom you wish to do business. Your numbers are 6, 10, 17, 21, 28, 30, 44.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A last-minute change will help you out financially. Stick to the rules and regulations to avoid a run-in with authority. Don't allow someone's uncertainty to limit your chance to get ahead. Work hard and play hard to reach your goals. ☼☼☼☼☼

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Put more emphasis on what you do and how you do it. Perfection will allow you to continue to move in a positive direction. Networking will connect you with someone who takes an interest in something toward which you are working. ☼☼☼

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Keep busy. Idle time will lead to doing or saying the wrong thing. A money-making plan should be kept secret for the time being. Don't let anyone take advantage of what you've worked so hard to acquire. Protect your assets. ☼☼☼

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Do what's best for you. A partnership based on equality will enable you to make an impact on a meaningful project. Love is in the stars. Nurture any relationship that is important to you and good results will transpire. ☼☼☼

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Plan to have some fun, and at the same time do your best to impress the people you encounter. Offering suggestions and being complimentary will lead to opportunity, as long as you are moderate when it comes to spending and indulging. ☼☼☼☼☼

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Don't leave anything to chance. Do your research and present what you have found in detail. Don't let your emotions take over or cause you to make an impulsive move that can change the outcome of something you've been working hard to achieve. ☼☼

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Communication will lead to the changes you've been seeking. Adjust a partnership to meet your needs; your unusual approach will be brilliantly executed and well-received. A money matter can be resolved, and an investment can be made. ☼☼☼☼☼

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You'll be prone to overreaction in matters pertaining to work and how you earn your living. Focus on being the best you can, not criticizing others or trying to change the past. Think outside the box to find a solution. ☼☼☼

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emotional deception will lead to problems with someone who can be abusive. Don't lead anyone on or give the wrong impression if you want to avoid controversy. Focus on the changes you can make at home to improve your personal life. ☼☼☼

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Back away from anyone asking for a handout. Concentrate on financial gains and ways to improve your life. Love is in the stars, and someone worthy of what you have to offer will offer as much in return. ☼☼☼

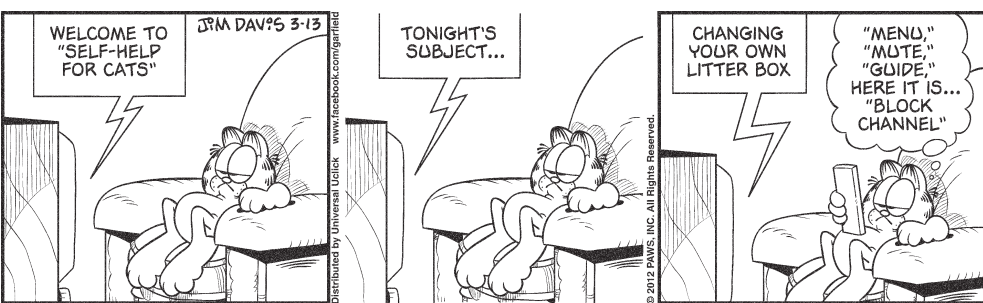

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Put personal issues on the back burner until you are in a better position to make sound choices. Focus on how you can earn more money or what you can offer to attract a partnership that can lead to your advancement. ☼☼☼☼☼

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Someone isn't telling the truth. Revisit recent developments in a partnership and you'll realize what needs to be addressed. A misunderstanding could impact your life if handled poorly. Don't neglect what needs to be done. ☼☼

You haven't filed an income tax report in how long?

Dishonesty never pays

Governments lose billions of tax dollars every year from the income of individuals and businesses, as well as from unpaid taxes. Tax evasion can take many different forms: Tax shelters, undeclared work, excessive tax planning, omitting to submit an income tax return or to declare revenue earned from investments on the stock exchange, etc.

Consequences for tax evaders

Tax evasion has major consequences for those who are caught: It can result in a criminal conviction. If they are found guilty, they could receive a heavy fine, go to prison or end up with a criminal record with all the negative repercussions this situation can result in.

Consequences for the general public

This embezzlement of public funds also has consequences for society in general. Governments invest considerable sums of money in attempting to catch poor payers and tax evaders. This money, added to that lost every year due to tax evasion, amounts to a huge loss of revenue for governments. These losses directly affect their level of debt and influence their capacity to provide services and to finance programs in response to the needs of our society; social programs are often the first to be cut. Moreover, law-abiding individuals see their tax burden increased unfairly.

Tax evaders, as much as society in general, are affected by tax evasion. So pay what you owe now before having to pay too much at a later date.

Tax time is approaching fast so be sure to call 270.765.3862 to participate in The News-Enterprise 2012 Tax Directory. You're guaranteed to see a return on this investment!
